

---

Race and Inequity in Food Systems: Reforming the Curriculum

UCLA School of Law

---

Goals

1. Gathering and curating a variety of learning resources on food and race
  2. Developing curricular toolkits for teaching about overlapping issues of food, race, inequity, and law
  3. Providing publication space for law students writing on issues at the intersection of law, food, race, and inequity
-

Motivation

We want to show that all food is tied to issues of inequity and power and that the law is a powerful tool for promoting racial, social, and environmental justice. UCLA School of Law is a great place for this project, as the home of the Critical Race Studies program.

---

Academic Approaches

Critical Race Theory (CRT): recognizes that racism is embedded in every area of law and policy

Third World Approaches to International Law (TWAIL): recognizes our common struggles in a globalized society and the inherent limitations of a purely Westphalian approach

---

Get Involved

View our Resource Library

Make Recommendations
for our Library