City of New Orleans
Mayor LaToya Cantrell

Dear Friends,

It is my absolute pleasure as the Mayor of the City of New Orleans to welcome you to the Association of American Law Schools Annual Meeting.

In upholding and advancing excellence in legal education and supporting core values that include academic freedom, diversity, and fostering justice, you are making our judicial system more equal. We rely on professionals like you to ensure that the legal needs of our communities are met. I encourage each and every one of you to use this opportunity to listen, ask questions and network with your peers. Successes stem from collaboration.

During your visit, explore New Orleans and enjoy the unique experiences the city has to offer. New Orleans overflows with culture. Treat yourself to our world-famous cuisine, dance to our live, local music and visit our exceptional cultural institutions such as the National World War II Museum, the New Orleans Museum of Art and the Ashé Cultural Arts Center. The energy of our city is unmatched and the magic unparalleled. We invite you to experience every moment of it.

Thank you for visiting New Orleans. We hope you enjoy your stay, and return often to our wonderful city.

Sincerely,

LaToya Cantrell
Mayor
City of New Orleans

Welcome to New Orleans for the 2019 Annual Meeting of the Association of American Law Schools

Dear Colleague,

I am pleased to welcome you to New Orleans for what promises to be a dynamic, wide-ranging conference. It is certainly an exciting time to be a legal scholar. As public opinions and political divisions become increasingly polarized, we look forward to exploring with you the ways in which the legal academy can contribute to this year's theme of "Building Bridges."

The timing of this theme promises to yield challenging and complex examinations of the current legal climate and state of higher education. Where better to begin the process of building these bridges but between and among ourselves?

You will find hundreds of sessions that have been put together to include not only a broad range of issues, but a variety of formats from distinguished speakers to small group discussions. We welcome diverse viewpoints in AALS-led programs and Section programming. No other gathering of law professors and professional staff is as large or complete a representation of the varying perspectives that constitute our legal academy.

I extend my thanks to the 103 AALS Sections, who work throughout the year to provide the best panels and interactive sessions possible. Section programming makes up about three-quarters of the sessions at the meeting.

The remaining sessions are AALS-led—you can find more information about program types on page xii. I extend particular thanks to the Program Committee, the Arc of Career Committee, and AALS professional staff, many of whom you will see at various onsite events, for their work on every aspect of the meeting.

As you navigate the many scholarly and professional development opportunities available, I hope you will also have the chance to make the most of the networking and social events scheduled throughout the program.

We are glad to have you with us in the Big Easy, and look forward to the next four days. With all the best wishes,

Judith Areen
Executive Director

Building Bridges

One of the most vexing problems facing our nation today is the deep political polarization that has infected civic life. It is not just that people strongly disagree about important social and policy issues—that has always been true. But finding common ground has become harder because there are simply fewer political moderates—people whose views cross party lines on at least some issues—and because our political discourse has become increasingly disparaging and personal.

As our society struggles with this problem of deep polarization, lawyers and law schools have an important role to play. Lawyers are, after all, in the dispute resolution business. Resolving conflict is central to what we do. Today, perhaps more than ever before, the skills that we as lawyers have, and we as law professors teach, are of critical importance.

Lawyers understand how to structure decision-making and dispute resolution processes. We understand the importance of the opportunity to be heard and other aspects of fundamental fairness. We understand the importance of considering both sides and crediting the merits of opposing views. We understand the importance of facts—the ones we can prove, not merely the ones we wish to be true. And we understand the importance of inviting people with opposing views to the table to get them talking to each other in the first place.

Lawyers are not only comfortable navigating a world of conflict and disagreement, but they also approach disagreements with a methodology that is built on recognizing the strength of the opposing views. Legal pedagogy, like good lawyering, emphasizes the importance of developing a deep, even empathetic understanding of the arguments on the other side. Our case books include dissents which force students to confront opposing arguments. We constantly push our students away from the psychological comfort of certainty to that uneasy place where opposing views loom large.

The point is not that arguments should be drained of emotion. Where the stakes are high, emotions will run high. But lawyers understand that disputes, even on matters upon which convictions are deeply held, need not be personal, and that it is possible to separate the substance of an argument from the person making that argument. Lawyers likewise understand that it is possible to disagree without being disagreeable—indeed, we are admonished to do just that in our principles of professionalism.

Lawyers are not social workers, but they are, as Lon Fuller put it, architects of social structure. And in that role as architects, they can be—we can be—enormously helpful in reconnecting a fractured world. That is to say, in building bridges.

So that is my theme for the year: building bridges. I hope that we can put on display our traditions of professionalism, civility, and reasoned disagreement, and inspire the next generation to “think like a lawyer” about society’s problems: to listen, consider, reason, collaborate, resolve, and even heal.

Speaker Ready Room

*Eglinton Winton, Second Floor,
Hilton New Orleans Riverside*

To simulate the actual rooms where panels take place, the ready room is set theater style with an LCD projector and screen for speakers to test PowerPoint presentations. Speakers supply their own laptop for their presentation. The speaker ready room will also have a printer should you need to print out a set of your presentation notes.

MEETING INFORMATION

Badges

Admission Policy

Admission to any and all programs require your AALS name badge. Admission to ticketed events requires your name badge and a ticket.

Replacement Fee

If you lose your badge, please visit the Registration Desk in the Churchill Room and a replacement will be printed. Please note that, in an effort to “go green” and encourage less paper waste, a $10 badge replacement fee will apply.

For Spouse/Partner

A non-faculty/staff spouse or partner is welcome to attend with any full meeting registrant. There is a special type of registration for spouse/partner that you may purchase for $35 during your initial registration process or on-site at the Registration Desk in the Churchill Room. Please note that a spouse/partner registration may not be used by any individual who is also a law school faculty/staff member.

For Children

Come to the AALS Registration Desk and ask for badges for your children, which will provide them access to program sessions. There are additional fees for children to attend meal events.

Consent to Use of Photographic, Video, and Audio Materials

AALS will have a photographer and videographer at special events, sessions, exhibits, and throughout the hotel common areas used for the Annual Meeting. Photos and videos taken during the Annual Meeting will remain the property of AALS and may be distributed or used in future marketing materials. Your attendance at the Annual Meeting indicates your acceptance to be photographed, filmed, or recorded, and to AALS's use of your image, without payment of any kind, in program(s) and for other purposes designated by AALS in the future.

Continuing Education Credit

The AALS Annual Meeting offers attendees over 250 sessions on a wide variety of topics on the legal profession and legal education. In order to streamline the confirmation of attendance to the sessions, we ask each attendee to record his/her participation by signing the CLE sheet located at the back of each session room.

If you are unsure of whether or not you signed a session CLE sheet, please visit the AALS Information Desk. Staff can manually add your name, provided you bring a witness to your attendance at the session in question. Attendance cannot be changed on any sheet after the conclusion of the Annual Meeting.

After the Annual Meeting, you may request a letter of attendance by writing to cleattendance@aals.org. Please provide the date, time, and title of the session. AALS can only verify attendance for sessions where a registered attendee signs the Continuing Education Credit sheet or is a listed speaker in the program.

Internet

Guest Room WiFi

AALS registrants who booked their reservation through Experient will enjoy complimentary basic WiFi at the four AALS hotels. Premium WiFi is available at an additional cost.

Meeting Rooms and Public Space at the Hilton

Open a web browser, select "Hilton Meetings," and use the password AALS2019 to connect. This password is not case sensitive.

Law Student Volunteers

AALS thanks all law student volunteers at this year's Annual Meeting. These law students are the eyes and ears of AALS throughout the meeting and are essential to making sure all sessions run smoothly. If you see these law students around, please thank them for all of their hard work. We appreciate their time and dedication to helping AALS.

Lost and Found

Have you misplaced or found something at the Hilton? Just pick up the nearest house phone and dial extension 3812.

Luggage Storage

There is no fee for AALS attendees storing luggage at the participating AALS hotels. To store luggage please see an attendant at the Bell Stand.

MEETING INFORMATION

Mobile App

Download the AALS mobile app to easily view program details, speakers, hotel floorplans, exhibitor lists, and social features on your phone or tablet. You can also create a personalized schedule of sessions to attend. The mobile app is your source for the most current information, including all the late changes not included in this program. Visit your app store and search for “AALS Events.”

Phone Charging Station

*Churchill Room, Second Floor,
Hilton New Orleans Riverside*

A mobile charging station is located next to the Registration Desk in the Exhibit Hall.

Private Room for Nursing

AALS will provide a room for nursing parents each day of the meeting with electrical power, a refrigerator, and a locking door. Please visit the AALS Information Desk to request a key.

Recordings

AALS will record programming and sessions when possible and make the files available free of charge on the Annual Meeting website for faculty and professional staff from AALS member and fee-paid schools. The recordings may be distributed to the media, including comments from both the speakers and the audience. Speakers who have signed a refusal to record will still be recorded but will be edited out prior to posting or distribution. For questions related to recordings please visit the AALS Information Desk.

Sections

Business Meetings

Refer to the schedule or the app to learn the time and place of your Section’s business meeting.

Section Meal Events

Tickets for meal events are limited. If you did not add your meal event(s) to your online registration, purchase tickets for section breakfasts and luncheons at the Registration Desk before it closes on the evening prior to the event. We can accept your payment in advance, but tickets will not be sold at the door.

Section Resources

*Exhibit Hall, Churchill Room, Second Floor, Hilton New Orleans
Riverside*

If you are a Section Chair or Chair-Elect and would like to learn more about section resources, please visit AALS Sections Resources table located inside the Exhibit Hall. Incoming section leadership may also schedule an appointment by emailing jalbertson@aals.org.

Social Media

We hope you follow AALS on Twitter, Facebook, Instagram, and LinkedIn. Please tweet about the conference using the hashtag #AALS2019. You can also post directly from the app.

Speaker Materials

Materials provided by session speakers and panelists are available on am.aals.org and on the mobile app under the session description. More will be posted after the conference.

If you are a speaker, you may submit presentations or materials to be posted via our online submission form until February 15, 2019. PDF files are preferable, and all files must be accessible. For information visit <https://am.aals.org/program/materials/>.

Program Highlights

Here are a few highlights of the program that we are especially excited about:

Thursday, January 3

- Justice Edwin Cameron from the Constitutional Court of South Africa will join AALS President Wendy Perdue at the Opening Plenary Program on Building Bridges at 8:30 am.
- Wendy Perdue will welcome a distinguished group of legal scholars for the AALS President's Panel on Law and Reconciliation at 10:30 am.
- We will present to past AALS President Michael A. Olivas the AALS Triennial Award for Lifetime Service to Legal Education and the Law, our highest honor, at the AALS House of Representatives meeting at 3:30 pm.

Friday, January 4

- Friday will start strong with an exciting AALS Symposium on Court Debt: Fines, Fees, and Bail, Circa 2020 at 9 am.
- Do not miss a panel of current and former elected officials discussing the impact of polarization on our politics at the AALS President's Panel on Bridging the Divide of Political Polarization: A Conversation Among Elected Officials at 3:30 pm.

Throughout

Arc of Career programs have been specifically designed for faculty at various stages of their careers. Topics this year include:

- A Session for First Time Meeting Attendees: What is AALS and Why Does It Matter for My Career? And How Do I Get the Most Out of the Annual Meeting?
- What to Make of Student Evaluations
- Building Bridges and Social Justice Through Collaborative Centers and Initiatives
- Responding to the Call for a New Social Structure: Academia, Advocacy, Direct Action, and Attrition
- Encore Faculty: Preparing for Life Beyond the Legal Academy

Discussion Groups facilitate scholarly discussion and engagement with a small group of invited faculty. If you're not scheduled to be a discussant, you may still observe sessions on topics such as:

- Insider Trading and Cryptoassets: The Future of Regulation in the Blockchain Era
- The Future of Sexual Harassment
- Bridging the Divisions with Professional Identity Learning Outcomes that Encourage Cultural Competency in the Profession
- Building Bridges Across Curricular and Status Lines: Gender Inequity throughout the Legal Academy
- How Lawyers Can Build Bridges Across the Disciplines and in the Community
- Race and Class in the U.S.: The Legal Academy's and Profession's Role in Pacification and Social Change
- Building Bridges Between Theory and Practice: Incorporating Lawyering Skills into Doctrinal Courses

- Building Bridges: Examining Race and Privilege in Community Economic Development
- Cross-Generational Teaching: How to Remain Relevant in a Rapidly Changing World
- The Role of Law in Educational (In)equity

Open Source Programs are traditional scholarly topics outside of section programming. This year, consider attending sessions on:

- Equity in the Modern World
- Teaching About State Attorneys General
- Retreat from the Coasts?
- Rural Access to Justice
- Judicial Supremacy
- Energy Justice and the Green Energy Transition

Hot Topics are organized around late-breaking issues. Don't miss the following:

- Sexual Harassment & Violence Narratives: #MeToo, the Kavanaugh Allegations & Title IX Guidance
- Partisan Conflict and the Legitimacy of the Supreme Court
- Religious Exemptions and Harm to Third Parties
- Civil Rights in the Aftermath of the Kavanaugh Hearings and Confirmation
- Criminal Justice Reform Consensus?
- NAFTA 2.0: Are We Building or Burning Bridges With USMCA?

Networking Opportunities

Attending the Annual Meeting is as much about making connections with peers, mentors, and guests as it is about scholarship. A brief selection of events, both formal and informal, includes:

Wednesday, January 2

- For first-time attendees (or second-, or even third-time), connect with other newbies and learn how to get the most out of the meeting at What is AALS and Why Does It Matter for My Career? And How Do I Get the Most Out of the Annual Meeting? at 5:30 pm.
- If you attended the AALS Workshop for New Law School Teachers this year, the reunion is on! Join the AALS Reception for New Law Teachers at 6:30 pm.

Thursday, January 3

- Enjoy refreshments and light appetizers while mixing and mingling with the exhibitors and your colleagues from law schools across the country at the classic Opening Reception in the Exhibit Hall at 4:30 pm.

Saturday, January 5

- Minority law teachers, don't miss your opportunity to obtain a guide to tenure, tailored for faculty of color at the Workshop for Pretenured Law School Teachers of Color at 8:45 am. Later, join us for the workshop's networking reception from 4:30 pm – 5:30 pm.

Sunday, January 6

- Early-rising Section officers should take the opportunity to attend the annual Section Officers Breakfast. Share ideas with leadership other Sections and receive in-person support and guidance from the AALS Section Services Manager.

Throughout

- Coffee with Colleagues breaks happen several times per day, and are an ideal time to schedule relaxed, informal conversations with necessary connections, or just catch up with old friends.
- Exhibitors and sponsors are not only valuable supporters of the legal academy and AALS community, they may also be the key to your next book deal. Take advantage of time in the Exhibit Hall whenever possible.
- Celebrate the successes of the past year and have invaluable in-person face time with your communities at Section breakfasts and luncheons.
- Catch up with your current and former colleagues at law school receptions.

Types of Sessions and Programs

Planned by the 103 AALS Sections

AALS Section Programs – Most programs at the Annual Meeting are planned by sections. The majority of programs are 95 minutes in length. There are some extended programs with multiple sessions that can last a whole morning and/or afternoon.

Call for Papers Programs include at least one presenter selected from a call for papers.

Joint Programs are two or more Sections holding only one program between them.

Co-Sponsored Programs are two or more Sections holding more than one program together.

Pedagogy Programs are programs on pedagogy designed for new law school teachers.

Works-in-Progress are programs in which senior law scholars assist junior scholars ready their scholarship for submission to law reviews.

Selected by the AALS Program Committee

Discussion Groups provide an in-depth discussion of topics by a small group of invited discussants selected in advance by the Annual Meeting Program Committee. Additional discussants were selected through a Call for Participation. There will be limited seating for audience members to observe the discussion groups on a first-come, first-served basis.

Hot Topic Programs cover late-breaking issues of general interest.

Open Source Programs are traditional scholarly programs other than those sponsored by one of the AALS Sections (e.g., Section on Criminal Justice).

Symposia are a half-day or day-long opportunity to examine a specific issue topic in greater depth than is possible during a regular panel program.

Selected by the AALS Committee on Arc of Career Programs

Arc of Career programs are specifically designed to help law faculty with professional development over the course of their law school careers from pre-tenure, to reinvention at mid-career, to retirement.

Program Schedule

As of December 7, 2018

Wednesday, January 2

Wednesday, January 2

9 am – 5 pm

SECTION ON AGRICULTURAL & FOOD LAW; ENVIRONMENTAL LAW; AND NATURAL RESOURCES & ENERGY LAW FIELD TRIP

Side Driveway, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Climate Change Resiliency in Southern Louisiana

The field trip will offer a concrete look at the challenges that climate change poses to the coastal communities in Louisiana, which are some of the most climate-vulnerable communities in the United States. The field trip provides an opportunity to see these challenges first-hand as well as to discuss them with the community members most directly impacted. The field trip will also deliver insight into the practical responses that local communities have taken in light of this climate threat and into the legal challenges and opportunities involved in these responses.

Participants should meet at 8:45 am at the New Orleans Hilton, side driveway, at second set of glass entrance doors, (right past the gift shop) where you will depart at 9 am by bus for the field trip. You will return to the New Orleans Hilton by 5 pm. AALS now follows PCI Data Compliance Standards. We can accept your payment for the field trip up to 24 hours in advance, but in order to meet standards, we will not be selling tickets on the day of the field trip. Participants will need to sign a waiver of liability to participate in this off-site field trip.

AALS ARC OF CAREER PROGRAM: A SESSION FOR FIRST TIME MEETING ATTENDEES

Camp, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

What is AALS and Why Does It Matter for My Career? And How Do I Get the Most Out of the Annual Meeting?

Moderator: D. Benjamin Barros, University of Toledo College of Law

Speakers: Vicki C. Jackson, Harvard Law School
Wendy C. Perdue, The University of Richmond School of Law
Dov Waisman, Southwestern Law School

AALS thanks West Academic for generously sponsoring this session.

This session is intended for new law professors and administrators, especially those who have never attended an AALS Annual Meeting. After a quick introduction to the organization, members at various stages of their careers will briefly discuss their experiences with AALS. There will also be a candid discussion of why people attend the Annual Meeting and what they hope to get out of it. New members will have the opportunity to sign up for AALS sections. Members of the AALS leadership structure will be in attendance, and there will be time to have a dialogue with them about their AALS experiences.

Speakers: Margaret A. Burnham, Northeastern University School of Law
Mark A. Drumbl, Washington and Lee University School of Law
Jennifer Llewellyn, Professor of Law, Dalhousie University Faculty of Law
Linda R. Meyer, Quinnipiac University School of Law

In contexts ranging from mass atrocities to school discipline, lawyers have created legal and judicial processes that seek to promote healing, forgiveness, and community restoration. This panel will explore the opportunities and challenges of restorative justice processes and consider questions such as whether the desire for reconciliation is at odds with law or, to the contrary, is at the core of true justice; what conditions are necessary for restorative process to be successful; and what lessons can be learned from restorative justice efforts both in this country and abroad.

Steven I. Friedland, Elon University School of Law
Joseph Mastrosimone, Washburn University School of Law
Deborah J. Merritt, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz
College of Law

This program is designed to help new law school professors, perhaps even those who have just received student evaluations from their first semester of teaching, figure out the meaning, usefulness, and limits of student evaluations. To do so, seasoned law professors will share some of the comments they received after their first semester of teaching. In addition, speakers will address the bias and limitations of student evaluations forms, and will provide some suggestions for revising forms to address some of the limitations. And finally, speakers will offer suggestions on how to process and use evaluations to improve teaching performance.

As the cryptoasset ecosystem shows signs of emerging from its “Wild West” phase, insider trading has become a principal concern for trading platforms, investors, and regulators. Insider trading cases concerning cryptoassets present challenges, however, because the legal understanding of both cryptoassets and the markets in which they are generated, bought, and sold has been significantly outpaced by their development, expansion, and innovation. In the United States, market professionals, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC), the Commodities Futures Trading Commission (CFTC), and others debate whether virtual currencies are securities, contracts, currencies, commodities, or something else. Both the SEC and CFTC assert jurisdiction over cryptoassets, but (at this writing) neither has precisely defined the scope or nature of its purported regulatory oversight. This commercial and regulatory uncertainty leaves a number of questions about insider trading in cryptoassets unanswered. This Discussion Group considers these and other related concerns regarding insider trading in cryptoassets.

AALS HOT TOPIC PROGRAM

St. James Ballroom, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Sexual Harassment & Violence Narratives: #MeToo, the Kavanaugh Allegations & Title IX Guidance

Moderator: Kelly Behre, University of California, Davis, School of Law

Speakers: Deborah L. Brake, University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Hannah Brenner, California Western School of Law
Nancy C. Cantalupo, Barry University Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law
Tara Richards, Ph.D., Assistant Professor, University of Nebraska Omaha
School of Criminology and Criminal Justice

Media coverage of the #MeToo movement and allegations that Justice Kavanaugh committed sexual assault fueled public discourse about sexual harassment and sexual violence throughout the past year. Two sets of competing narratives emerged about both the nature of sexual harassment and sexual violence and the appropriate institutional and public responses to disclosures and allegations. One set of narratives focused on survivors' experiences of trauma, barriers to accessing resources, and inadequate responses following disclosures. The other set of narratives centered on individuals accused of committing sexual harassment or sexual violence, their identification as victims of false allegations, and claims of inadequate due process protections. In this presentation, scholars use the context of campus sexual misconduct and the proposed changes to Title IX guidance to address the wide range of narratives impacting sexual harassment and sexual violence law and policy.

Worker Justice in the Food System

Moderator: Margot Pollans, Pace University Elisabeth Haub School of Law

Speakers: Jennifer M. Chacon, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law
Joan Flocks, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law
Tanya Kateri Hernandez, Fordham University School of Law

One in six jobs in the U.S. is in the food supply chain, from restaurants, to grocery stores, to food processing, and production. These jobs offer low wages, little job security, and few benefits. In addition, they often include dangerous working conditions. And yet, food system workers are under protected by minimum wage and hour laws, workplace safety laws, and others. This panel will focus on three key issues facing food chain laborers today: sexual harassment, immigration restrictions and enforcement, and occupational health hazards.

The internet age presents serious substantive challenges to protecting informational privacy rights and the dignitary interests protected by the law of defamation. This program explores common law, statutory, and comparative perspectives on the possibility of civil recovery for harmful privacy invasions and defamatory communications via the internet. Is the internet, the predominate modern medium of communication, an instantaneous, universal, and permanent informational forum, the natural foe of personal privacy rights and human dignity? We discuss this broad question and its application to specific “thorny” issues with a panel of distinguished privacy scholars.

SECTION ON ECONOMIC GLOBALIZATION & GOVERNANCE

Royal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Globalization, Sustainability and Firm Cultures

Moderator: Cheryl L. Wade, St. John’s University School of Law

Speakers:

Larry Cata Backer, The Pennsylvania State University – Penn State Law

Miriam Cherry, Saint Louis University School of Law

Virginia Harper Ho, University of Kansas School of Law

Jeff Schwartz, University of Utah, S. J. Quinney College of Law

This panel will evaluate progress in promoting sustainability standards for multinational enterprises (MNEs). It will explore why some MNEs continue to engage in abusive practices that support environmental degradation, unsafe working conditions, and the like. It will also explore various actions taken by some MNEs, institutional investors, and banks that further sustainability objectives. The panelists will debate the moral and ethical responsibilities of MNEs, whether to maximize shareholder value or to pursue sustainability objectives that take into account the interests of society and all firm stakeholders. They will present their perspectives on the importance and effectiveness of corporate codes of conduct and the significance of social exhortations by various public bodies to pursue sustainability objectives. They will also explore regulatory gaps due to the loss of national sovereignty over global enterprises and how corporate cultures can change to further sustainability objectives.

Indian Law and Policy in the Era of Trump: Flashpoints and Challenges

Moderator: John P. LaVelle, University of New Mexico School of Law

Speakers: Hillary M. Hoffmann, Vermont Law School
Elizabeth A. Kronk Warner, University of Kansas School of Law
Robert J. Miller, Arizona State University Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law

Historically, the role of the executive branch of the U.S. government with respect to Indian policy has been to work in partnership with Congress to fulfill federal trust obligations to Indian nations and Native people. This panel addresses flashpoints and challenges with regard to meeting these obligations in the era of the Trump presidency. Topics include the potential for fostering bipartisan support for the development of private sector economies and for encouraging and protecting the development of private economic rights in Indian country; the Trump administration's controversial reduction of Bear Ears National Monument and what this abrupt policy change signals for tribes interested in co-management arrangements during the remaining years of the Trump presidency; and Trump administration policies supporting extractive industries operating within and near Indian country, with particular focus on how these policies detrimentally impact tribal communities through climate change and by endangering Native people, especially women and children.

SECTION ON LAW & SPORTS, CO-SPONSORED BY CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Grand Salon Section 7, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The Dark Side of Sports: Crime, Corruption, and Cost

Moderator: Jodi S. Balsam, Brooklyn Law School

Speakers: William W. Berry, III, University of Mississippi School of Law
Samir A. Gandhi, Managing Partner, Sidley Austin LLP – New York
John Holden, Assistant Professor, Department of Management, Oklahoma State University Spears School of Business
Dionne L. Koller, University of Baltimore School of Law

Sports are usually thought of as a force for good, demonstrating values of teamwork, perseverance, and human achievement. However, sports are as susceptible as any global industry to criminal activity and corruption, imposing significant costs on the many constituencies who make up and support the game. Criminality in sports has manifested in management corruption (e.g., FIFA and U.S. college basketball bribery scandals), threats to the integrity of the game (e.g., gambling-related match-fixing in professional tennis), and abuse of vulnerable athletes (e.g., Larry Nassar's molesting underage gymnasts). Although the sports industry has responded with good governance initiatives and efforts at self-policing, these reforms have not abated the calls for greater public regulation of sports, including the imposition of criminal penalties. This program examines what constitutes sports corruption and criminality that public policy and resources should address, and what is the appropriate legislative and law enforcement response to sports world misconduct.

SECTION ON LAW, MEDICINE & HEALTH CARE*Commerce, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideDirections of State Health Care (Law) Reform

- Moderators: Marc A. Rodwin, Suffolk University Law School
Roy G. Spece, Jr., The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law
- Speakers: Scott C. Burris, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law
Mark A. Hall, Wake Forest University School of Law
David K. Jones, Assistant Professor, Department of Health Law, Policy & Management, Boston University School of Public Health
Christopher T. Robertson, The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law

In the context of seeming paralysis, incoherence, and intransigence at the federal level, this program looks to possible health care (law) reform at the state level. The program will address four of the areas in which state health (law) reform is worthy of consideration: opportunities and challenges for health care reform at the state level, state reforms to stabilize the health insurance market, problematic variance in state health law, and directions of state public health law reform.

SECTION ON NATIONAL SECURITY LAW*Grand Salon Section 19, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideCivil-Military Relations and Patriotism as Oppression

- Moderator: Rachel E. VanLandingham, Southwestern Law School
- Speakers: Phillip Carter, Senior Policy Researcher, Rand Corporation
Geoffrey Corn, South Texas College of Law Houston
Peter Margulies, Roger Williams University School of Law
Dakota Rudesill, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz College of Law

Signs of a dysfunctional civil-military relationship within our democracy are plentiful, and perhaps a symptom of a malaise this country has seen before, harkening to the Alien & Sedition Act days: patriotism used to oppress civil rights and suppress dissent. From the prominent role of general officers within the Trump Administration to the reflexive veneration of military members within American society, to the hijacking of serious political issues by false claims of military ties (suddenly the national anthem at football games is an ode to those serving on active duty?), the military is being used (and perhaps allowing itself to be used) to manipulate, coerce, and distort. This panel of former military officers, civilian policy makers, and national security law scholars will discuss whether these claims are valid versus overblown, and analyze proposals to ensure the U.S. military plays an appropriate role within our constitutional democracy.

SECTION ON PRELEGAL EDUCATION & ADMISSION TO LAW SCHOOL

Grand Salon Section 3, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Within their Grasp: Admitting, Financing and Supporting DREAMERS and DACA Students

Moderator: Jannell L. Roberts, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Speakers: Bruce A. Boyer, Loyola University Chicago School of Law
Jorge Garcia, University of San Diego School of Law
Denise L. Gilman, The University of Texas School of Law
Darren L. Nealy, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz College of Law

Recent government action makes the state of the DACA (Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals) program and DREAMers uncertain. As enrollment professionals, faculty, and counselors, how can we effectively work with prospects, current students, and graduates as they navigate the changing sands in immigration policy. How do we (or should we) assist students seeking to enroll in law school, secure financial aid, and receive certification for admission to the bar. Hear from colleagues about navigating immigration policy and what to consider when counseling and working with students, what resources are available, and how to guide them as they apply to the bar and manage life beyond.

SECTION ON PROFESSIONAL RESPONSIBILITY, CO-SPONSORED BY LEADERSHIP*Camp, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideThe Ethics of Lawyers in Government*Moderator: Margaret C. Tarkington, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of LawSpeakers: Kathleen Clark, Washington University in St. Louis School of Law
Melissa Mortazavi, University of Oklahoma College of Law
Richard W. Painter, University of Minnesota Law SchoolSpeakers from a Call for Papers:Rebecca Roiphe, New York Law School
Ellen Yaroshefsky, Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University

Within the United States, the role of the government lawyer has catapulted to the national stage. The ethics of government officials and their personal lawyers, of lawyers employed by the government, and lawyers heading government agencies and investigations are facing national scrutiny and attention. High-ranking government attorneys, including Sally Yates, James Comey, and Preet Bharara, have been removed from office. The press and citizenry are engaged in a robust debate regarding the legitimacy and integrity of our government and its processes. In such a climate, it is critical to examine the role and ethical obligations of lawyers in government service. What responsibilities do lawyers have—and what concrete actions can they take—if and when lawyers find themselves working for a governmental employer who is engaged in potentially unethical, unconstitutional, or illegal activity? What can lawyers do to preserve and improve the legitimacy and integrity of our system of government?

AMERICAN BAR FOUNDATION PROGRAM

Grand Salon Section 19, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Women Trailblazers in the Law Oral History Project

Moderator: Ajay K. Mehrotra, Director, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law

Speakers: Barbara A. Babcock, Stanford Law School
Brooksley Born, Retired Partner, Arnold & Porter LLP
Nancy Gertner, Harvard Law School
Beth Williams, Stanford Law School

The Women Trailblazers Project (WTP) oral history collection is a rich new trove of research materials, now readily accessible to legal academicians, historians and other scholars. The WTP, a collaborative research project of the American Bar Association and the American Bar Foundation, has taken comprehensive, full-life oral histories of over a hundred leading women pioneers in the legal profession nationwide. These senior women lawyers, judges and law professors were chosen for their exceptional career achievements and their contributions to opening opportunities for other women. They entered a male-dominated profession, graduating from law schools in the years ranging from the 1940s to the 1970s, and often faced blatant sex discrimination and a variety of other challenges. The Robert Crown Law Library at Stanford University has created a new website dedicated to displaying the WTP collection of oral histories and related materials.

AALS OPEN SOURCE PROGRAM

Jackson, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Equity in the Modern World

Speakers: Kristin A. Collins, Boston University School of Law
Jake Linford, Florida State University College of Law
Michael T. Morley, Florida State University College of Law
Nicholas Parrillo, Yale Law School
Caprice Roberts, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

Equity has evolved in important ways since its rise in England and acceptance in the United States. The relationship between law and equity changed substantially following their 1937 merger in the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. During the Civil Rights Era, equity became an essential tool for enforcing constitutional rights. Because of its roots in the Seventh Amendment and Article III of the Constitution, as well as federal and state courts' general reliance on equitable principles applied by the English Court of Chancery, equity nevertheless remains much more firmly rooted in the past than most other fields of law. This panel will explore the challenges posed by applying equitable principles and remedies in today's world, ways of adapting equity to the needs of modern society, and the propriety of particularly powerful forms of equitable relief that courts have imposed in some of the most controversial cases facing our nation.

AALS DISCUSSION GROUP*Grand Salon 15 & 18, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideThe Future of Sexual Harassment*Discussion Group Moderator:

Brian Soucek, University of California, Davis, School of Law

Discussion Group Participants:

Rachel Arnow-Richman, University of Denver Sturm College of Law

Jessica Clarke, Vanderbilt University Law School

Dorothy S. Lund, University of Southern California Gould School of Law

Ann C. McGinley, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, William S. Boyd School of Law

Melissa E. Murray, New York University School of Law

Angela I. Onwuachi-Willig, Boston University School of Law

Darren Rosenblum, Pace University Elisabeth Haub School of Law

Vicki Schultz, Yale Law School

This discussion group brings together scholars working on various dimensions of sexual harassment law at work and on campus. To ground the discussion, participants are encouraged to read and respond to the “Open Statement on Sexual Harassment” by Vicki Schultz, recently published in the Stanford Law Review at www.stanfordlawreview.org/metoo-symposium. The ensuing discussion will center on questions including: What is sexual harassment? What causes it? What makes a theory of harassment better or worse? Does harassment differ at work and on campus (and elsewhere), or by race, ethnicity, age, class, sexual orientation, gender non-conformity, or other factors? What can be done, in the law or elsewhere, to prevent and address harassment? How has activism and the law helped or hindered progress, whether historically and today? What are the dangers to be avoided in the future?

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

AALS HOT TOPIC PROGRAM*St. Charles Ballroom, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversidePartisan Conflict and the Legitimacy of the Supreme Court

As appointments to—and decisions by—the Supreme Court have become increasingly divisive, many observers have expressed concern that the legitimacy of the Court is at stake. Our constitutional system relies on a Supreme Court that is trusted to have the final say on the meaning of the Constitution because the Justices are insulated from partisanship and politics. But the public increasingly sees the Court as being driven by partisan considerations.

Panelists will discuss two questions. First, do we have to worry about the legitimacy of the Supreme Court? Second, what steps should be taken to address concerns about the Court’s legitimacy? Some states use judicial nominating commissions for appointments to their supreme courts. Should there be a federal judicial nominating commission? What other reforms would be desirable?

In addition to discussing concerns raised by recent Supreme Court appointments, panelists will address questions of legitimacy from a broader historical perspective.

Jefferson Ballroom, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Circling the Square: Fresh Partnerships to Understand Student Learning and Bar Performance through Empirical Studies

For sessions and speaker details, please see the complete listing under extended programs on page 108.

Academic support plays a critical role in promoting student success and learning, and empirical research into various learning processes can yield vital information to help all law faculty promote effective learning. This three-hour workshop features work identified through a call for proposals, many of which addressed learning issues and the bar examination. It includes two plenary panels that feature empirical research on bar examination performance and related issues, followed by eleven concurrent break-out sessions through which participants can explore in greater depth topics covered in the plenary sessions and work in progress on academic support and related issues.

Business meeting for Academic Support will be held on Friday, January 4, 2019 from 7 am – 8:30 am.

 Jenny E. Carroll, Hugh F. Culverhouse Jr. School of Law at The University of Alabama
 Shanta Trivedi, University of Baltimore School of Law

Poverty is a persistent, pernicious social problem in the United States. The population that is most affected by poverty because of political/legal anomie is children. This session explores how children's lives are impacted by, among other poverty-related risks, instability of housing, child welfare and foster care, compromised physical and mental health, inability to access quality education, juvenile justice, immigration status, and environmental justice. Panelists will share their unique and cutting-edge scholarship and experiences in one or more of these areas related to children and poverty.

Business meeting held at program conclusion.

SECTION ON CIVIL RIGHTS, CO-SPONSORED BY SEXUAL ORIENTATION & GENDER IDENTITY ISSUES

Commerce, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Resistance in the Streets and Through the System: The Phenomena of Protest in the Trump Era

Moderator: Barbara Kritchevsky, The University of Memphis, Cecil C. Humphreys School of Law

Speakers: Elizabeth M. Iglesias, University of Miami School of Law

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Julie Goldscheid, City University of New York School of Law

Kathleen S. Morris, Golden Gate University School of Law

Sunita Patel, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

The theme for this year's panel on civil rights is protest and resistance. Since the 2016 election, Trump's policies and discourse have triggered significant amounts of both. Protests in defense of immigrants, LGBTQ people, women, the disabled, people of color, the elderly, environmental sustainability and justice, science, and truth itself have been organized in mass numbers. Protests have been organized in the streets, in government buildings and legislative houses, in and around airports, and at town hall meetings. These protests have in turn triggered reactions from the familiar overreactions of excessive force and mass arrests to less familiar, and sometimes shockingly unprecedented, reactions like legislative proposals to impose severe fines and jail time or to immunize vigilante violence against protestors. Against this backdrop, this panel calls for a robust reclamation and resurgence of civil rights practice, teaching, and scholarship that is intersectional, coalitional, and global in its conceptualization and execution.

SECTION ON CONTINUING LEGAL EDUCATION

Grand Salon Section 9, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Alternative Sources of Revenue: Certificates, Centers, & Non-Attorney Courses

Speakers: Amber Brugnoli, West Virginia University Office of Global Affairs
Barbara A. Glesner Fines, University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Law
Elsbeth Magilton, University of Nebraska College of Law
Charlotte Tschider, Mitchell Hamline School of Law

The post-2011 shift in the job market and student application pools forced law schools to explore other potential revenue sources and to examine ways to remain impactful within their communities. One of these routes includes offering certificate programs for practicing attorneys desiring specialization, and continuing education courses for non-lawyers working in a legal field. These new methods of teaching the law present challenges for busy faculty and administrators, and often require revamping and compartmentalization of traditional courses. The fact that these programs can be offered outside of the usual semester timeline, or solely through web-based services, can be both advantageous and challenging depending on how your school chooses to approach them. This session will provide guidance and tips on implementing specializations for lawyers and basic instructional programs for other professionals, whether via online technology or in-person. We will discuss the “stackable model,” under which schools may allow students to build their own educational path over time. These techniques permit law schools to become more integrated with various units on campus, and promotes their knowledge to a larger portion of the population.

Business meeting will be held at program conclusion.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON EDUCATION LAW

Royal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Markets, Money, and Public Education

Moderator: Twinette L. Johnson, University of the District of Columbia, David A. Clarke School of Law

Speakers: Nicole S. Garnett, Notre Dame Law School
William Koski, Stanford Law School
Erika Wilson, University of North Carolina School of Law

Speaker from a Call for Papers: Susan L. De Jarnatt, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law

Law reform efforts vary as to the role they assign to markets and money in improving the field of public education, but one thing is certain: debates about markets and money are not going away. As alternative models of schooling (such as charters, publicly funded voucher programs, and online school systems) continue to grow, they are disrupting traditional public education in ever increasing ways. From stressing budgets to sinking enrollment, municipalities, counties, and states are struggling with how to fund and operate new schooling models while striving for high quality in their traditional public schools. Meanwhile, litigation efforts challenging state funding systems proceed in both traditional and new formats, and questions about equity pervade the debate. This session will explore these and related topics.

Business Meeting will be held on Friday, January 4, 2019 from 7 am – 8:30 am.

Papers from this program will be published in Georgetown Journal of Poverty Law and Policy.

St. James Ballroom, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Disaster Response, Recovery, and Relief in Minority Communities

Moderator: Kalyani Robbins, Florida International University College of Law

Speakers: Rebecca M. Bratspies, City University of New York School of Law
Maxine Burkett, University of Hawaii, William S. Richardson School of Law
Victor B. Flatt, University of Houston Law Center
Susan S. Kuo, University of South Carolina School of Law
Matthew Tejada, Director of the Office of Environmental Justice, Environmental Protection Agency
Clifford Villa, University of New Mexico School of Law

This panel addresses the impacts of and responses to recent disasters and related environmental issues, both natural and man-made, in minority communities. In 2017, the numerous hurricanes that made their way through the Atlantic Ocean were particularly destructive, notably devastating Texas, Florida, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and Puerto Rico. Also in 2017, California experienced several seasonal catastrophes that were especially ruinous including heavy rains, flooding, wildfires, and mudslides. Climate change is only worsening the impacts on living conditions, and environmental migration is on the rise. The results of all of these disasters and other environmental harms have persisted into 2018 and the effects will likely linger for quite a while. This panel addresses legal recovery from, responses to, and remedies for these disastrous events, with emphasis on minority communities, which are often under-resourced and under-attended when misfortunes fall upon them.

Business meeting for Environmental Law at program conclusion.

Business meeting for Minority Groups will be held during the section's luncheon on Saturday, January 5, 2019 from 12:15 pm – 1:30 pm.

Business meeting for State and Local Government will be held during the section's breakfast on Thursday, January 3, 2019 from 7 am – 8:30 am.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON JEWISH LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW & RELIGION

Grand Salon Section 7, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The Evolution and Use of “Judeo-Christian” in American Law and Public Life

Speakers:

Sanford Levinson, The University of Texas School of Law

Mark R. Silk, Director and Professor, Trinity College, Leonard Greenberg

Center for Study of Religion in Public Life

Amelia J. Uelmen, Georgetown University Law Center

In the current climate, the term “Judeo-Christian” is most likely deployed by cultural conservatives arguing in favor of traditional family structures and for an enhanced role for traditional religion in the public square. The goal of this panel is to analyze the history and contemporary usage of this phrase from a variety of religious, historical, and jurisprudential perspectives so to refine debates about current usage, and explore when, how, and to what effect the term entered public discourse. Uncovering the usage and meaning of this phrase will deepen our understanding of how religious groups form political alliances, unearth the shifting theological commitments of both Jews and Christians, and offer a window into how a variety of Americans conceptualize the religious charter and character of the United States.

Business meeting will be held at program conclusion.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON PRO-BONO & PUBLIC SERVICE OPPORTUNITIES, CO-SPONSORED BY LEADERSHIP

Grand Salon Section 3, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Encouraging and Empowering the Next Generation of Public Interest and Pro Bono Leaders

- Moderator: Susan B. Schechter, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
- Speakers: Diane Chin, Stanford Law School
 Alanah Odoms Hebert, Executive Director, American Civil Liberties Union
 William P. Quigley, Loyola University New Orleans College of Law
 A’Niya Robinson, Law Student, Loyola University New Orleans College of Law
- Facilitator: Tara Casey, The University of Richmond School of Law
 Janet M. Heppard, University of Houston Law Center
 Laila L. Hlass, Tulane University Law School
 Stephen Rispoli, Baylor University School of Law
 Pamela D. Robinson, University of South Carolina School of Law
 Thomas J. Schoenherr, Fordham University School of Law

A critical role of law schools is redefining what it means to be a lawyer. While many believe that ‘real’ lawyering means litigating cases, this session will explore ways to guide students looking for a different path: policy advocacy, restorative justice, community lawyering, social entrepreneurship, pro bono, public interest organization leadership, and more. Lawyers are more satisfied when they are meaningfully engaged. As leaders, we help students identify their values and how they can effectuate them through experiences, resources, and relationships. This session will examine how students seek alternative paths in their careers, discuss creative ways to help them explore pathways consistent with their values and provide ideas attendees can translate into action. As we help students build bridges between their coursework and legal careers, we can help them forge paths into uncharted territory.

Business meeting at program conclusion.

Federal Courts, continued

Federal Courts can be an intimidating course for both professors and students alike. This panel of experienced Federal Courts teachers will provide a number of perspectives on how to teach the course. The panel will cover points such as: What topics should be taught as part of the Federal Courts class? What themes hold the topics together? What types of teaching approaches—traditional Socratic, problem sets, small group work and discussion—work best for teaching the material? This panel will be particularly useful for new Federal Courts teachers, but more experienced professors will benefit too.

Jarrod E. Shobe, Brigham Young University, J. Reuben Clark Law School

This works-in-progress program will bring together junior and senior scholars in the field of legislation for the purpose of providing the junior scholars with feedback and guidance on their draft articles. Paper topics include statutory interpretation, the political process, the budget process, and more. Each junior scholar will present a paper, followed by commentary and discussion led by a senior commentator. All scholars interested in Legislation & the Law of the Political Process, even if neither presenting nor commenting, are encouraged to attend and participate in the discussions.

3:30 pm – 5:15 pm

SECTION ON MINORITY GROUPS, CO-SPONSORED BY CIVIL RIGHTS

Commerce, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Critical Pedagogy in the Era of Diversity

Moderator: SpearIt, Gonzaga University School of Law

Speakers: Nadia Ahmad, Barry University Dwayne O. Andreas School of Law
Meera Deo, Thomas Jefferson School of Law
Teri McMurtry-Chubb, Mercer University School of Law
Mae C. Quinn, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

Due to myriad economic and social factors, the racial, ethnic, and gender composition of law students has become more diverse across the nation. Similarly, the demographics of law faculty have shifted, albeit at a slower pace, toward more racial and gender diversity. In 2009, the Association of American

Law Schools estimated that thirty-two percent of law professors are women and twenty-eight percent are racial and ethnic minorities. How does such increased diversity affect the law school classroom? More specifically, what does it mean for law school pedagogy? This panel explores how law faculty are responding to these demographic shifts and reimagining classroom norms. Topics will include how to incorporate more inclusive teaching strategies, enhancing student engagement, addressing identity issues within the curriculum and classroom, preparing students to practice in a diverse society, and the role of experiential learning and academic support.

Business meeting held during the section luncheon on Saturday, January 5, 2019 from 12:15 pm – 1:30 pm.

3:30 pm – 5:15 pm

The Documentary Film Selection: The Loving Story (Augusta Films, 2011)

Moderator: Christine Alice Corcos, Louisiana State University, Paul M. Hebert Law Center

The film follows the story of Richard and Mildred Loving, an interracial couple who fell in love and married during the Civil Rights era. Exiled from their home in Virginia due to miscegenation laws, the couple enlists the help of two young ACLU lawyers, Bernard S. Cohen and Philip J. Hirschkop, to argue their case and legitimize their marriage. After having their motions denied due to racist sentiments within the Virginia courts, Cohen and Hirschkop make one final effort—appealing the Lovings' case to the U.S. Supreme Court. This documentary about the landmark Loving v. Virginia case combines a story of unflinching love with the fight for civil rights and demonstrates that, against all odds, love can conquer all.

AALS SCHOLARLY PAPERS PRESENTATION*Royal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside*

Moderator: Eric C. Chaffee, University of Toledo College of Law, Chair of the Scholarly Papers Committee

Winners: Maureen (Molly) E. Brady, University of Virginia School of Law: "The Forgotten History of Metes and Bounds"
James Nelson, University of Houston Law Center: "Corporate Disestablishment"

To encourage and recognize excellent legal scholarship and to broaden participation by new law teachers in the Annual Meeting program, the association sponsored a call for papers for the 33rd annual AALS Scholarly Paper Competition. Those who have been full-time law teachers at an AALS member or fee-paid school for five years or less on July 1, 2018, were invited to submit a paper on a topic related to or concerning law by August 2, 2018. A committee of established scholars reviewed the submitted papers with the authors' identities concealed. The authors of the selected winning papers will present and discuss their paper at this session.

AALS OPEN SOURCE PROGRAM*Magazine, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideTeaching About State Attorneys General

Moderator: Anthony Johnstone, Alexander Blewett III School of Law at the University of Montana

Speakers: Peter Brann, Harvard Law School
Heidi L. Feldman, Georgetown University Law Center
Thomas M. Fisher, Solicitor General, Office of Solicitor General, State of Indiana
Carolyn Shapiro, Chicago-Kent College of Law, Illinois Institute of Technology
Amy Tenney Curren, Director, National Attorneys General Training & Research Institute, National Association of Attorneys General
Jim Tierney, Harvard Law School

State Attorneys General focus on today's most controversial legal issues. Beyond the headlines of state challenges to the Obama and Trump administrations, the Attorney General's docket includes state constitutional law, federal courts, consumer protection, tort litigation, criminal justice, financial regulation, antitrust, environmental law, civil rights, nonprofit corporations, and labor law. Attorneys General and their staff also confront unique ethics issues of client identity, confidentiality, and use of outside counsel. Thus, courses on the Attorneys General offer a microcosm of the entire public law curriculum. This panel will discuss ways in which law schools can integrate the role of the Attorney General into the curriculum, including full courses, clinics, and class sessions that feature this important work. It will feature advice from pioneers in the field, including former and current state officials who are bringing their experiences into the classroom.

AALS DISCUSSION GROUP

Grand Salon Section 13, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Bridging the Divisions with Professional Identity Learning Outcomes that Encourage Cultural Competency in the Profession

Discussion Group Moderators:

Michael T. Colatrella, Jr., University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
Jeffrey Proske, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law

Discussion Group Participants:

Anastasia M. Boles, University of Arkansas at Little Rock, William H. Bowen School of Law
Cary A. Bricker, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
Susan L. Brooks, Drexel University Thomas R. Kline School of Law
Neil W. Hamilton, University of St. Thomas School of Law
Mary A. Lynch, Albany Law School
Jerome M. Organ, University of St. Thomas School of Law
Debra Moss Vollweiler, Nova Southeastern University Shepard Broad College of Law
Carwina Weng, Indiana University Maurer School of Law

Demographic changes projected in the United States ensure a diversifying population for generations to come. These changes pose significant challenges for law schools whose mission is to graduate students who can become effective advocates for this diversifying population to ensure that they have meaningful access to justice. To meet this ever expanding need, the American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar ("ABA"), and the Association of American Law Schools ("AALS") have made a concerted effort to encourage their member law schools to demonstrate that they are incorporating specific learning outcomes in their curricula to ensure their students achieve some measure of cultural competency to prepare them for careers serving an ethnically and culturally diverse population.

This Discussion Group will join a diverse group of legal educators from around the U.S. who have engaged in developing learning outcomes to meet the objectives of the ABA and AALS with respect to cultural competency. Each discussion participant will present a learning outcome they developed at their law school and discuss how they mapped the achievement of that outcome in their law school's curriculum. Other participants from a call for participants would also be welcome to join the discussion. Individual participants may elect to publish scholarly papers related to their participation in the discussion.

The Discussion Group Organizers will moderate a discussion among the group that will include the following topics:

1. What learning outcomes has your law school developed to meet the objective of ensuring students' cultural competency?
2. How has your law school determined it has met the objectives of its cultural competency learning outcomes?
3. What specific ways has your law school implemented cultural competency learning outcomes?
4. How has your law school assessed cultural competency learning outcomes?

Grand Salon Section 10, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Religious Exemptions and Harm to Third Parties

- Moderator: Robin Fretwell Wilson, University of Illinois College of Law
- Speakers: Stephanie Barclay, Brigham Young University, J. Reuben Clark Law School
 Frederick Mark Gedicks, Brigham Young University, J. Reuben Clark Law School
 Christopher C. Lund, Wayne State University Law School
 Amy Sepinwall, Assistant Professor, Legal Studies and Business Ethics, The Wharton School University of Pennsylvania Legal Studies and Business Ethics Department
 Nelson Tebbe, Brooklyn Law School

Should the government be able to provide religious exemptions when they result in harm to third-parties? This question is particularly weighty at this moment in American history when religious exemptions have perhaps never been more controversial. In light of recent Supreme Court cases like Hobby Lobby and Masterpiece Cakeshop, some scholars have advanced new theories that would place strict limits on government's ability to grant religious exemptions that result in harm (or externalities) to third parties who do not benefit from that religious practice. This program will explore the historical, theoretical, normative, and doctrinal arguments for and against a rule that would prohibit religious exemptions that result in more than de minimis harm to identifiable third parties.

and the disempowered. This panel of constitutional, criminal, and animal law experts will address the successes and failures of the movement as a civil rights initiative. Does animal protection provide a path towards more general anti-oppression efforts, or is it replicating the problems of race, gender, and power that characterize society more generally?

SECTION ON CONFLICT OF LAWS

The Hague Judgements Convention

Moderator: Ralf C. Michaels, Duke University School of Law

Speakers: Donald E. Childress, III, Pepperdine University School of Law
John F. Coyle, University of North Carolina School of Law
Genevieve Saumier, Professor, McGill University
Louise Ellen Teitz, Roger Williams University School of Law

In May 2017, the Special Commission on the Recognition and Enforcement of Foreign Judgments at the Hague Conference finished negotiations towards a worldwide Judgments Convention. A diplomatic session next year will finalize what is now a draft convention and create a Treaty that will then be open for ratification. The judgments project was initiated by the United States several decades ago. The original project was discussed intensely in the United States in the 1990s, before irreconcilable differences especially with the European Union led to a halt. By contrast, this time around, discussion in the U.S. has been almost non-existent, save some interest in the questions of Intellectual Property. This panel will debate the merits of the current project, with regard to possible changes on the one hand, and a possible ratification on the other.

Automatic Discrimination: Algorithms, Big Data, and the Law of Employment Decisions

Moderator: Joseph R. Fishkin, The University of Texas School of Law

Speakers: Ifeoma Ajunwa, Cornell Law School
Stephanie Bornstein, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law
Pauline T. Kim, Washington University in St. Louis School of Law
Andrew Selbst, Postdoctoral Scholar, Data & Society Research Institute
Charles A. Sullivan, Seton Hall University School of Law
Kelly Trindel, Ph.D., Head of I/O Science & Diversity Analytics, Pymetrics

Employers across our economy are increasingly using new, technologically sophisticated tools to make decisions about which employees to hire, promote, and fire, as well as decisions about performance evaluation and pay. Some of these tools draw on unusual data sources; others use new “big data” methods to mine data for relevant correlations and inferences. How are legal actors—employers, employees, judges—supposed to decide whether the actions employers take with the help of these new tools constitute discrimination? Employment discrimination law is only beginning to come to grips with this question, which raises fascinating questions of its own about how best to apply theories such as disparate treatment and disparate impact to these novel decision-making methods. This panel will bring together many of the leading scholars in this rapidly emerging field from both inside and outside the legal academy to evaluate these questions.

SECTION ON TRANSACTIONAL LAW & SKILLS

Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Transactional Law and Finance: Challenges and Opportunities for Teaching and Research

Moderator: Christina M. Sautter, Louisiana State University, Paul M. Hebert Law Center

Speakers: Robert P. Bartlett, III, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
Deborah Burand, New York University School of Law
Kristin N. Johnson, Tulane University Law School
Julie D. Lawton, DePaul University College of Law
Robert J. Rhee, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Jordan M. Barry, University of San Diego School of Law
Anne M. Tucker, Georgia State University College of Law

This program will examine the role of finance in business transactions from various perspectives with the goal of inspiring more deliberate consideration of finance in law school teaching and legal scholarship. From structured finance to real estate, from mergers and acquisitions to capital markets, finance plays an important and fundamental role in transactional law. The intersection of transactional law and finance is dynamic, providing academics, practitioners, and the judiciary with both challenges and opportunities. First, a panel will focus discuss financial literacy pedagogy, which may include teaching methods, teaching business and finance basics joint degree programs; learning how to communicate with business/finance people, small group work, and courses with non-law students (such as courses with business school students). The second part of the program will consist of scholarly presentations selected from a Call for Papers.

Canal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Building Bridges with Shared Experiences: The Women In Legal Education Oral History Project

Moderator: Cynthia L. Fountaine, Southern Illinois University School of Law
Lisa A. Mazzie, Marquette University Law School

Speakers: Phoebe A. Haddon, Rutgers University-Camden
Carrie J. Menkel-Meadow, University of California, Irvine School of Law
Kaelyn J. Romey, Golden Gate University School of Law

For the past four to five years, a small group of Women in Legal Education Section members, led by Professor Marie Failing (Mitchell Hamline School of Law), have been recording oral histories of women in the legal academy. The Oral History Project's goal is to gather as many stories as possible to develop a robust library of histories that can be used for research, study, or enjoyment. More than 40 women have been interviewed as of January 2018. In this session, panelists will explain the Oral

“Court Debt”: Fines, Fees, and Bail, Circa 2020

For sessions and speaker details, please see the complete extended program description on page 112.

This symposium, co-sponsored by the Sections on Civil Procedure, Tax, Bankruptcy, and Criminal Justice, examines how courts are financed and the growing reliance on user fees, whether for filing or defending civil cases; charges imposed on criminal defendants such as “registration fees” for “free” lawyers; the imposition of both civil and criminal “fines”; and the use of money bail. We explore whether and how constitutional democracies can meet their obligations to make justice accessible, both to participants and to the public, in light of the numbers seeking help from courts, high arrest and detention rates, declining government budgets, and shifting ideologies about the utility and desirability of accessible courts. These topics have prompted the creation of national and state task forces; litigation (including challenges to detention of individuals eligible for release but lacking funds to secure bail bonds, and the automatic losses of drivers’ licenses for nonpayment of fines); and a mix of economic, political, and legal analyses probing the effects of “court debt.”

For those interested in reading cases and commentary in advance, a 2018 volume, Who Pays? Fines, Fees, Bail, and The Costs of Courts, is available at https://law.yale.edu/system/files/area/center/liman/document/liman_colloquium_book_04.20.18.pdf. Many other articles are available and, in advance of the symposium, we plan to provide a bibliography with additional readings.

An edited set of essays will be published after the symposium in the North Carolina Law Review.

Allison D. Martin, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law

David E. Sorkin, The John Marshall Law School

Tara Willke, Duquesne University School of Law

A panel will address current best practices for distance-based legal education, with a specific emphasis on the tools and methods best suited for distance education. Panelists will share their experiences and provide insight for attendees seeking to create or participate in a distance-based course. The second portion of the program will focus on technologies applicable to distance learning that can be used in the classroom. This portion of the program will be “hands on,” with attendees spending a few minutes learning about several of the tools, rotating among their choice of about five different demonstrations.

SECTIONS ON NORTH AMERICAN COOPERATION AND INTERNATIONAL LEGAL EXCHANGE JOINT PROGRAM*Grand Salon Section 6, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideDo You Know What I Know? Understanding Common Law and Civil Law Pedagogy*Moderator: Lisa M. Black, California Western School of Law
Lauren Fielder, The University of Texas School of LawSpeakers: Katharina Boele-Woelki, President, Bucerius Law School
Jorge Cerdio Herran, Head of Academic Department of Law, Autonomous Technological Institute of Mexico (ITAM)

Marian Dent, Pericles International Law Center

Jean-François Gaudreault-DesBiens, Professor of Law, University of Montreal Faculty of Law

John Smagula, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law

Fernando Villarreal-Gonda, Academic Dean, Facultad Libre de Derecho de Monterrey

Mark E. Wojcik, The John Marshall Law School

Rubén Minutti Zanatta, Professor, Escuela Libre de Derecho

Practitioners often assume that lawyers from across a border or an ocean will naturally understand what they mean, as though law exists as a universal construct and terms can be directly translated. This program examines the way that law is taught in different countries and how that both affects and reflects the way that law is practiced in them. The first half of the program will be a panel presentation by deans and professors from both civil law and common law systems. The second half will be a presentation drawn from a call for papers. There will be time for open discussions at the end so that we can all share our ideas and ideals for pedagogy. By learning how others learn, we may expand our own understanding of our international students, colleagues, and the global profession.

SECTION ON SOCIO-ECONOMICS

Grand Salon Section 16, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Gender, Race and Competition in the New Economy

- Moderator: June Rose Carbone, University of Minnesota Law School
- Speakers: Tamara C. Belinfanti, New York Law School
Naomi R. Cahn, The George Washington University Law School
Jessica Clarke, Vanderbilt University Law School
Frank A. Pasquale, University of Maryland Francis King Carey School of Law
Steven A. Ramirez, Loyola University Chicago School of Law
Michael L. Selmi, The George Washington University Law School

Anti-discrimination law took hold during an era in which “good jobs” involved “narrow portals of entry” into secure career ladders. The predominant economic theory of discrimination at the time suggested that different treatment involved employment and consumer “tastes” or dislike of other groups. Today’s economy has dismantled the secure employment and predictable career ladders of midcentury America. In the process, inequality has grown, and the dominance of white (and in some cases Asian) men has increased in the upper reaches of the economy. Indeed, while the gendered wage gap has narrowed overall, the gap has increased for college graduates since the early nineties. This panel will consider how to understand the redefinition of “good jobs” in a networked economy, the new remade terms of competition among employees, and the implications for gender and racial diversity.

SECTION ON TEACHING METHODS, CO-SPONSORED BY EVIDENCE; CONTRACTS; AND TORTS & COMPENSATION SYSTEMS

Grand Salon Section 19, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Bringing Modern Pedagogy to the Traditional Doctrinal Classroom: A Peaceful Revolution

- Moderator: Susan S. Kuo, University of South Carolina School of Law
- Speakers: Kris Franklin, New York Law School
Paula Manning, Western State College of Law at Argosy University
Michael H. Schwartz, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
Laurie B. Zimet, University of California, Hastings College of the Law

This program addresses the issues involved in bringing modern pedagogy to the traditional law classroom. The program’s ultimate goal is ambitious and broad: to make teachers across the curriculum aware of how seamlessly modern pedagogy can be employed in their classes and to provide concrete tools to achieve this transition. Presenters will be modelling active learning techniques that can be easily transposed into any classroom setting. Discussion will also consider carefully some of the customary concerns about applying pedagogical innovation in large foundational law school courses. The target audience is all law professors and the session will offer new options for seasoned law school professors while also empowering new professors to feel more confident about adopting new teaching methods.

A virtual business meeting was held prior to the Annual Meeting.

AALS COMMITTEE ON THE RECRUITMENT AND RETENTION OF MINORITY LAW TEACHERS AND STUDENTS*Grand Salon Section 18, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideBuilding a Better Mentor: Creating High-Impact Mentoring Programs for Law Students of Color*Moderator: Olympia R. Duhart, Nova Southeastern University Shepard Broad College of LawSpeakers: Leila M. Abu-Orf, 3L Student, Loyola University New Orleans College of Law
Devon Wayne Carbado, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law
Kim D. Chanbonpin, The John Marshall Law School
Ruben J. Garcia, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, William S. Boyd School of Law
Gregory Scott Parks, Wake Forest University School of Law

Despite efforts made to support law students of color, several students still report a mentoring gap. Many law students do not have a mentor, and those with a mentor often report that the relationship is not effective in making them feel integrated into the law school experience and poised for success. This program will explore the important role law faculty can play in “Building Bridges” with law students of color through high-impact mentoring experiences. This panel will highlight best practices for mentoring students of color; it will also address challenges to mentoring success. These challenges include: the unequal distribution of service obligations, time constraints, unrecognized work, and the needs of millennial students. This program will examine the special significance a positive mentoring experience has for minority students and offer concrete suggestions and caveats for faculty serving as mentors.

The goal of the program is to highlight persistent issues of gender inequity in the legal academy that disadvantage all women faculty and students, particularly those of color. In keeping with the conference theme of Building Bridges, panelists are representative of various ABA-categorized faculty, including traditional tenured faculty employed under ABA Standard 405(b), clinical faculty employed under ABA Standard (405(c)), and legal writing faculty subject to ABA Standard 405(d), as well as faculty holding administrative positions. Discussion participants hope to share common experiences and begin a conversation that will continue well beyond the Annual Meeting. Planned areas for discussion include gender inequities inherent in legal scholarship, institutional labor and leadership, perceptions and expectations applicable to female faculty, and hierarchies related to security of position.

10:30 am - 12:15 pm

SECTION ON CLINICAL LEGAL EDUCATION, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW, MEDICINE, & HEALTH CARE

Breaking Out of Silos: Bridging Disciplines to Create the Next Generation of Collaborators for Justice

Moderator: Yael Cannon, Georgetown University Law Center
Natalie Chin, Brooklyn Law School

Speakers: Andrew Hsi, Director, University of New Mexico Health Science Center
Institute for Resilience, Health and Justice
Medha D. Makhoulf, The Pennsylvania State University – Dickinson Law
Tomar Pierson-Brown, University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Sarah Steadman, University of New Mexico School of Law

This program focuses on ways to structure inter-professional opportunities for law students to engage with students and professionals from other disciplines through a social justice lens. The program will explore how to promote and facilitate holistic problem identification, problem-solving and advocacy from a variety of disciplinary lenses and perspectives. Participants will learn how faculty can engage in research, service, and teaching to develop lawyers who can work across disciplines in pursuit of justice. This type of bridge-building is critical, in light of the many barriers to justice for the most vulnerable among us. The panel will explore how we can benefit from moving out of our silos and working with other professionals who share our social justice vision and aims.

Business Meeting will be held during the section luncheon on Thursday, January 4, 2019 from 12:15 pm – 1:30 pm.

10:30 am - 12:15 pm

SECTIONS ON COMMERCIAL & RELATED CONSUMER LAW AND CREDITORS' & DEBTORS' RIGHTS JOINT PROGRAM

Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau: Past, Present, and Future

Speakers: Kathleen C. Engel, Suffolk University Law School
Deepak Gupta, Founding Principal, Gupta Wessler PLLC
Patricia A. McCoy, Boston College Law School

Speakers from a Call for Papers:
Hosea H. Harvey, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law
Alexandra Everhart Sickler, University of North Dakota School of Law

The Consumer Financial Protection Bureau was created following the 2008 financial crisis with the intended goal of making markets for consumer financial products and services work for all Americans.

Congress granted the Bureau broad powers to enforce and regulate consumer financial protection laws and entrusted it with a number of consumer-facing responsibilities. This program will examine the tumultuous history of the CFPB, from its creation as part of the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, its actions over the Director Richard Cordray's tenure, the legal fight over who currently leads the Bureau, and the actions of the interim director named by President Trump. Panelists will also discuss the possible future of the CFPB and the "lessons learned" from its history and what they tell us about future fights to ensure consumers are protected in the financial products marketplace.

Business meeting for Commercial and Related Consumer Law will be held at program conclusion.

Business meeting for Creditors' and Debtors Rights will be held at program conclusion.

10:30 am - 12:15 pm

SECTION ON CONTRACTS, CO-SPONSORED BY BUSINESS ASSOCIATIONS AND INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS

Magazine, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Protecting Human Rights in Supply Chains: Moving from Policy to Action

- Moderator: Jennifer S. Martin, St. Thomas University School of Law
- Speakers: Sarah Dadush, Rutgers Law School
Chris Johnson, CEO and Co-Founder, Center for Justice, Rights, and Dignity
Nancy S. Kim, California Western School of Law
Ramona Lampley, St. Mary's University School of Law
David V. Snyder, American University, Washington College of Law

This session will discuss the text and issues related to the Proposed Final Report of the Working Group to Draft Human Rights Protections in Supply Contracts for the American Bar Association Business Law Section. The hope is that the draft contract provisions will form a part of corporate chain contracts seeking to help eradicate labor trafficking and child labor from supply chains, making a difference to real people—their health, safety, and freedom, and in some cases, life and death. Adoption of policies, while a good start, is not always enough: principles need to be put into practice. One way to do so is to put them in supply contracts. The contracts or related documents (like purchase orders) are what govern, and often guide, the behavior of the parties. When combined with effective remedies for their violation and a willingness to enforce them, they have great potential to make a difference.

A virtual business meeting was held prior to the Annual Meeting.

SECTION ON CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Canal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Rape and Sexual Assault in the Era of #MeToo

- Moderator: Jenny E. Carroll, Hugh F. Culverhouse Jr. School of Law at The University of Alabama
- Speakers: Bennett Capers, Brooklyn Law School
Erin Collins, The University of Richmond School of Law
Cynthia M. Godsoe, Brooklyn Law School
Aya Gruber, University of Colorado Law School
Corey Rayburn Yung, University of Kansas School of Law

In 2015, the American Law Institute (ALI) sought to redefine the Model Penal Code's definition of rape. To date, ALI's membership has failed to reach consensus. They are not alone in struggling to define the crime of rape. State and federal actors have struggled with questions of how to define rape and how (or even whether) to construct processes around the crime. This panel considers these efforts in the era of the #MeToo movement, which has highlighted the prevalence of workplace sexual harassment, sexual assault, and attitudes that condone and promulgate this behavior. While not all of the behavior #MeToo addresses falls within proposed definitions of rape, the larger social norms the movement challenges nonetheless influence how criminal law defines the crime of rape. This panel will consider how #MeToo has changed the questions that legislators, police officers, practitioners, and scholars ask when considering the crime of rape.

10:30 am – 12:15 pm

SECTION ON FEDERAL COURTS

Congressional Structuring of the Judicial Power

Moderator: Jonathan R. Siegel, The George Washington University Law School

Speakers: Seth Davis, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
Vicki C. Jackson, Harvard Law School
Thomas H. Lee, Fordham University School of Law
Troy A. McKenzie, New York University School of Law
Amanda L. Tyler, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

This panel will explore the vexing question of Congress's power to take cases away from the federal courts. When can Congress strip Article III courts of jurisdiction over cases they could otherwise hear? Under what circumstances can Congress vest jurisdiction over such cases in non-Article III tribunals? Panelists will address these issues generally and with particular reference to the Supreme Court's recent decisions in Oil States Energy Services v. Greene's Energy Group (regarding non-Article III tribunals) and Patchak v. Zinke (regarding jurisdiction-stripping). The panel will feature a lively conversation among the panelists rather than set speeches.

Business meeting will be held on Friday, January 4, 2019 from 7 am – 8:30 am.

10:30 am – 12:15 pm

SECTION ON INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY, CO-SPONSORED BY LEGISLATION & LAW OF THE POLITICAL PROCESS

Intellectual Property Exhaustion, and Post-Sale Restraints

Moderators: Christine Haight Farley, American University, Washington College of Law
Guy A. Rub, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz College of Law

Speakers: John F. Duffy, University of Virginia School of Law
Shubha Ghosh, Syracuse University College of Law
Christina Mulligan, Brooklyn Law School

Speaker from a Call for Papers:
Aaron Perzanowski, Case Western Reserve University School of Law

IP exhaustion has been heavily litigated in recent years, including twice in the past five years before the Supreme Court: Kirtsaeng in 2012 and Lexmark in 2017. The goal of this panel is to explore the open questions, challenges, and opportunities following those decisions. The decisions established an international exhaustion regime in both copyright law and patent law but related questions were left open, especially concerning the ability of IP rights-holders to establish and enforce post-sale restrictions.

Such open questions include, for example, what restrictions can be imposed by establishing licensing or lending arrangements instead of sales, and how courts should distinguish those transactions? To what degree other legal tools, such as contracts law or private property law, be used to establish post-sale restrictions? Can trademark law restrict grey-market importation, now that copyright and patent law cannot? How, if at all, should exhaustion be applied in the digital space?

A virtual business meeting was held prior to the Annual Meeting.

10:30 am – 12:15 pm

SECTION ON LABOR RELATIONS & EMPLOYMENT LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW & RELIGION

Grand Salon Section 22, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Increasing Tension: Labor and Employment Law Protections and Religious Accommodations

Moderator: Joseph Mastro Simone, Washburn University School of Law

Speakers: Charlotte Garden, Seattle University School of Law
Christopher C. Lund, Wayne State University Law School
Marcia L. McCormick, Saint Louis University School of Law
Saerom Park, Associate General Counsel, Service Employees International Union (SEIU)

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Dallan F. Flake, Ohio Northern University, Pettit College of Law

This program will focus on the increasing tension between workplace and antidiscrimination laws and religious freedom. Panelists will explore the challenges presented by this tension when religious exemptions from workplace and antidiscrimination laws are provided to religious organizations, employers with deeply held religious beliefs, and individual employees. A panel of leading labor and employment law and law and religion scholars will address that issue from varying perspectives, including constitutional law (religious freedom and/or compelled speech and association in the workplace), traditional labor law (NLRB's jurisdiction over religiously affiliated employers and the impact on employee organizing drives), and employment discrimination law.

Business meeting at program conclusion.

SECTION ON PROPERTY LAW

Grand Salon Section 4, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Property, Capitalism, and Structural Inequality

Moderator: Priya S. Gupta, Southwestern Law School

Speakers: Andrea J. Boyack, Washburn University School of Law
Carol Marguerite Rose, The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law
Etienne C. Toussaint, University of the District of Columbia, David A. Clarke School of Law
Frank K. Upham, New York University School of Law

With the rise of the individualized “gig” economy, the increasing reliance on financial actors in economic and urban development projects, the privatization of pension arrangements and the attacks on unions, and the scandals of inequality and housing crises in many places around the world, it is hard not to recognize that the role of property in globalized forms of capitalism has been shifting over the past decades. These transforms manifest themselves legally in the forms of property, the identities of property holders—and relatedly, the patterns of social life—that are seen as legitimate and as worthy of protection and perpetuation. Newly empowered agents, governance mechanisms, and discourses provide the conceptual and material architecture that support these transformations. This panel attempts to contextualize those shifts by engaging with local instantiations of transnational patterns of property concentration and exclusion, and their justifications.

SECTION ON PRO-BONO & PUBLIC SERVICE OPPORTUNITIES SERVICE PROJECT, CO-SPONSORED BY POVERTY LAW

Side Driveway, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Service Project at Ozanam Inn

The service project will be held at Ozanam Inn, a non-profit, direct service agency serving the homeless and needy of greater New Orleans. While the Inn's immediate priority is to offer aid and comfort by providing for basic needs like food, shelter and clothing, they also offer case management and counseling to help move individuals from homelessness to independent living. Volunteers will serve a midday meal at the Inn.

The service project site, 843 Camp Street, is walking distance from the Hotel. Meet at 12:45 pm in the Hilton New Orleans Riverside at the side driveway of the hotel at the second set of glass entrance doors (right past the gift shop) to walk together. Participants will need to sign a waiver of liability to participate in this off-site project.

AALS ARC OF CAREER PROGRAM

Grand Salon Section 22, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Moderator: Suzanne A. Kim, Rutgers Law School

Speakers: Matthew L.M. Fletcher, Michigan State University College of Law
Hari Michele Osofsky, The Pennsylvania State University – Penn State Law
Lauren Sudeall, Georgia State University College of Law

This session addresses starting collaborative and interdisciplinary centers, programs, and initiatives at law schools. Panelists have founded or lead robust centers or initiatives that engage in research, advocacy, curricular work, and programming that address complex and enduring social problems. Discussion will include the following: How can collaborative centers and initiatives advance social justice and build bridges? What are different models for working through centers? How can centers' activities complement classroom teaching, clinical teaching, legal scholarship, job placement, and other work of law schools? What avenues can centers provide for collaboration across disciplines and between communities? What are challenges for law school-based centers in pursuing advocacy, research, curricular work, and policy reform through centers and related initiatives? How does stage of career affect the benefits and challenges of pursuing work through centers? How does type of law school influence the possibilities and scope of center work?

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

Friday, January 4

Lawyers and law schools often remain siloed from the spaces where connections are built in community—e.g. community centers, small business associations, faith communities, federally qualified health centers, startup incubators, and on social media. Are these silos self-imposed by the profession, or are they the result of a public perception that lawyers are primarily useful only when conflict arises? Is it due to the law's increasing complexity, which in turn increases the costs of researching, learning, and applying it correctly, widening the gap between those able to access and use the law and those for whom application of the rule of law seems out of reach? This session brings together law professors (including some based outside of law schools) who seek to break down these silos and deepen connections between lawyers, community groups, policymakers, and other professionals for a discussion of the challenges and benefits of different forms of community engagement.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

AALS HOT TOPIC PROGRAM*Jefferson Ballroom, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideCivil Rights in the Aftermath of the Kavanaugh Hearings and Confirmation*Moderator: Naomi R. Cahn, The George Washington University Law School

Speakers: Susan Bisom-Rapp, Thomas Jefferson School of Law
 Jessica Clarke, Vanderbilt University Law School
 Cynthia L. Fountaine, Southern Illinois University School of Law
 Yxta Murray, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles
 Camille Gear Rich, University of Southern California Gould School of Law
 Vicki Schultz, Yale Law School

AALS Hot Topic Program, continued

In this Hot Topic Panel, legal scholars will address the ways in which Justice Kavanaugh's nomination, hearings, and confirmation impact a wide variety of legal domains, including sexual harassment and assault laws, workplace equality, policing, substantive and criminal law, administrative law, the field of judicial ethics, and the standards of proof appropriate for criminal, legal, and political processes. We will also engage the ways in which Justice Kavanaugh's role in today's political and legal climate intersects with jurisprudence, such as critical legal feminism and the moral theory of epistemic injustice.

1:30 pm - 3:15 pm

SECTION ON AGING & THE LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY FAMILY & JUVENILE LAW; MINORITY GROUPS; TRUSTS & ESTATES; AND WOMEN IN LEGAL EDUCATION

Grand Salon Section 4, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The Legal Consequences of Living a Long Life: The Differential Impact on Marginalized Communities

Moderator: Browne C. Lewis, Cleveland-Marshall College of Law at Cleveland State University

Speakers: Donohon Abdugafurova, Ph.D Candidate, Emory University Islamic Civilizations Studies
Anne L. Alstott, Yale Law School
Matthew W. Green, Jr., Cleveland-Marshall College of Law at Cleveland State University
Jalila Jefferson-Bullock, Duquesne University School of Law
Beverly I. Moran, Vanderbilt University Law School
Nancy E. Shurtz, University of Oregon School of Law
Jessica Dixon Weaver, Southern Methodist University, Dedman School of Law

Thanks to advances in healthcare, people are living longer. Longevity has legal consequences. People can outlive their family, friends, and finances. Longevity has differing impacts on women, people of color, low-income people, and LGBT individuals. Statistically, women make less money than men and they live longer than men. People of color are less financially secure than most Americans. In the United States, approximately 80 percent of long-term care for older people is provided by family members, such as spouses, children, and other relatives. This places an undue financial burden on families and on low-income persons. LGBT individuals may face conscious and unconscious discrimination when seeking long-term care and other assistance, and they have had historically formed different family structures. This panel will explore the intersection of the legal system and longevity, examining systems that are in place or should be in place to help people plan for living longer.

Business meeting a program conclusion.

Papers from this program will be published in Cleveland State University Law Review.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON BUSINESS ASSOCIATIONS, CO-SPONSORED BY CONTRACTS; SECURITIES REGULATION; AND TRANSACTIONAL LAW

Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Contractual Governance: The Role of Private Ordering

Moderator: Anne M. Tucker, Georgia State University College of Law

Speakers: Jill E. Fisch, University of Pennsylvania Law School
Cathy Hwang, University of Utah, S. J. Quinney College of Law
Yaron G. Nili, University of Wisconsin Law School
Hester M. Peirce, Commissioner, United States Securities and Exchange Commission
Megan W. Shaner, University of Oklahoma College of Law

The program will explore the use of contracts to define and modify the governance structure of business entities, whether through corporate charters and bylaws, LLC operating agreements, or other private equity agreements. From venture capital preferred stock provisions, to shareholder involvement in approval procedures, to forum selection and arbitration, is the contract king in establishing the corporate governance contours of firms? In addition to paper presenters, the program will feature prominent panelists including SEC Commissioner Hester Peirce and Professor Jill E. Fisch of the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

18th Amendment Centennial: The Past, Present and Future of Prohibition

Moderator: Shaakirrah Sanders, University of Idaho College of Law

Speakers: Lolita K. Buckner Inniss, Southern Methodist University, Dedman
School of Law
Ned Hemard, Historian and Writer, New Orleans Bar Association
J. Nikol Jackson-Beckham, Assistant Professor of Communication Studies,
Randolph College
Wesley M. Oliver, Duquesne University School of Law
Julie C. Suk, Professor and Dean for Master's Programs, The Graduate Center, The City University of New York

This program explores the 18th Amendment's text and its drafters. This discussion includes recognition of the feminist constitutional legacy of prohibition and its repeal. This program will also discuss the 18th Amendment's continuing legacy of misregulation. Drawing on inspiration from sources that include the Crescent City itself, this program explores how some bootleggers, bakers, and others thwarted regulation from 1919 through repeal in 1933, while others faced harsh enforcement on the basis of race, sex, socio-economic status, and other factors. This program contemplates the cultural and economic legacy of prohibition that continues to shape the everyday politics of food and drink in the United States and its Territories.

SECTION ON ELECTION LAW

Grand Salon Section 6, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Protecting American Democracy from Foreign Interference

- Moderator: Kate Shaw, Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law
- Speakers: Herbert Lin, Holland Fellow in Cyber Policy and Security, Hoover Institution at Stanford University
Bradley A. Smith, Capital University Law School
Jennifer Taub, Vermont Law School
Ciara Torres-Spelliscy, Stetson University College of Law

The 2016 election was marred by a series of hostile acts by non-U.S. actors designed to disrupt various aspects of the American democratic process, including hacking the DNC, distributing those hacked emails, purchasing political advertisements on social media in violation of long standing prohibitions on foreign political expenditures, and encouraging political rallies among rival groups to foment political discord in the United States. This panel will discuss the election law, constitutional law, criminal law, and national security law aspects of securing American elections from foreign interference.

Business meeting at program conclusion.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON INTERNET & COMPUTER LAW

Jackson, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The Internet of Bodies: Cyborgs and the Law

- Moderator: Christina Mulligan, Brooklyn Law School
- Speakers: Robert A. Heverly, Albany Law School
Andrea M. Matwyshyn, Northeastern University School of Law
Elizabeth A. Rowe, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Nancy S. Kim, California Western School of Law

Forget networked toasters—Internet-connected devices are increasingly being integrated into human bodies, for medical, experimental, and expressive purposes. How will the legal issues surrounding the “Internet of Bodies” differ from the “Internet of Things”? How should regulatory agencies approach these phenomena? What inspires people to “hack” their own bodies? These issues and more will be explored by our panel.

A virtual business meeting was held prior to the Annual Meeting.

SECTION ON LAW LIBRARIES & LEGAL INFORMATION

Canal, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Building and Maintaining Support for your Law Library

- Moderator: Sara Sampson, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz College of Law
- Speakers: Leslie A. Street, Mercer University School of Law
Carol A. Watson, University of Georgia School of Law
Ronald E. Wheeler, Boston University School of Law

This session will address ways to increase awareness and support of the valuable work that library staff performs. Specific areas addressed include working with law school development directors to target potential donors and assist with fundraising and educating the law school community about work that goes on behind the scenes. Attendees will develop short “elevator pitches” designed to quickly inform stakeholders of important projects of the library.

Business meeting at program conclusion.

1:30 pm – 3:15 pm

SECTION ON LEGISLATION & LAW OF THE POLITICAL PROCESS, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW & INTERPRETATION

21st Century Textualism

Moderator: Evan C. Zoldan, University of Toledo College of Law

Speakers: Jonathan H. Adler, Case Western Reserve University School of Law
Victoria Nourse, Georgetown University Law Center

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Aaron-Andrew P. Bruhl, William & Mary Law School
Mark Seidenfeld, Florida State University College of Law

Statutes dominate the American legal landscape and statutory text has become the focal point for questions of statutory interpretation. But, despite widespread agreement that text matters, there is less agreement among scholars and judges about how statutory text helps determine statutory meaning. This panel will explore how textualist arguments and methods are developing in the 21st Century, including current trends and practices in the courts and theoretical justifications for, and objections to, textualist methods of statutory interpretation.

Paul Farhi, Reporter, The Washington Post
RonNell Andersen Jones, University of Utah, S. J. Quinney College of Law
Lyrissa B. Lidsky, University of Missouri School of Law
Sonja R. West, University of Georgia School of Law

Just after the 2016 election, a panel of media law scholars and journalists gathered at the AALS Annual Meeting in San Francisco to predict the future of press freedoms under President Donald Trump. Now, two years later, the same panel—including newcomer Paul Farhi, the Washington Post's media reporter—reunites to weigh the accuracy of those predictions, to assess the current state of press freedoms in the Trump era, and to predict what the next two years and beyond may hold for journalists and the laws that protect them.

SECTION ON NEW LAW PROFESSORS

Grand Salon Section 3, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Building Bridges: Teaching to Students of Different Backgrounds, Interests, and Strengths

Moderator: Dov Waisman, Southwestern Law School

Speakers: Carliss N. Chatman, Northern Illinois University College of Law
Darrell D. Jackson, University of Wyoming College of Law
Howard E. Katz, Cleveland-Marshall College of Law at Cleveland State University
Susan S. Kuo, University of South Carolina School of Law

The student bodies of most U.S. law schools are more heterogeneous than ever. New law professors face the daunting challenge of figuring out how to engage students who vary along a number of critical axes. Law students come from diverse racial, ethnic, national, socioeconomic, and religious backgrounds, and, of course, differ in gender and sexual orientation. Students also vary widely in their interests regarding the area of law they wish to focus on (e.g., civil v. criminal), the type of lawyer they wish to become (e.g., litigator v. transactional attorney), and their ultimate career goals. Finally, students vary significantly in their aptitudes for critical thinking, reading comprehension, attention to detail, and interpersonal communication. This panel will explore strategies for creating a classroom experience that effectively engages and supports students of markedly diverse backgrounds, interests, and strengths.

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Matthew A. Bruckner, Howard University School of Law
James J. Fishman, Pace University Elisabeth Haub School of Law
Tracey M. Roberts, Samford University, Cumberland School of Law
Mark Sidel, University of Wisconsin Law School

Education has been changing, and it is not clear that nonprofit law is keeping up. In both post-secondary and primary/secondary education, for-profit, nontraditional nonprofit, and mixed forms of educational institutions continue to grow. In addition, changes to charitable giving and endowments in the recent tax reform may have an impact on educational organizations. This program focuses on legal issues faced by educational organizations and regulators as education changes.

Christopher B. Seaman, Washington and Lee University School of Law

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Hannibal Travis, Florida International University College of Law

The Supreme Court's docket shows increased interest in the availability and scope of IP remedies. Global enforcement of IP remedies spans remedies from enhanced damages to tailored injunctive relief. This panel will engage an integrated discussion among experts on provocative IP-Remedies topics including the legacy of eBay on injunctions, reasonable royalties, restitution and recovery of an infringer's profits in light of the Restatement (Third) of Restitution and Unjust Enrichment. The panel will explore such questions as: should the status of the right holder affect the relief, especially if the holder uses remedies process to exact exorbitant licensing fees; are reasonable royalties legal or equitable; what are the implications of FRAND licensing commitments on reasonable royalties; what level of intent and fitness relative to other remedies should be required to obtain a gain-based remedy?

Julie A. Nice, University of San Francisco School of Law

In March 2018, The LGBTQ Poverty Initiative released its report, Intersecting Injustice: A National Call to Action: Addressing LGBTQ Poverty and Economic Justice for All. The report notes that “contrary to the gay affluence myth perpetuated by the mainstream media, LGBTQ people disproportionately struggle with poverty.” This is true across a variety of measures, and on each of those LGBTQ people of color fare worse than their white counterparts. This program brings together people working—inside the academy and out—on legal and policy issues concerning poverty in LGBTQ communities.

Nadia N. Sawicki, Loyola University Chicago School of Law

Elizabeth Weeks, University of Georgia School of Law

John Valery White, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, William S. Boyd School of Law

This panel will explore the bi-directional relationship between the fields of tort law and health law. The influence of tort law on some basic aspects of health law is well known. For example, tort law provides causes of action, privileges, and defenses on which plaintiffs and defendants rely in traditional medical malpractice cases. This panel will focus on some of the less obvious ties and relationships between the fields, including the potential of tort law to perpetuate healthism (i.e., differential treatment based on health status) through various doctrines, including the active versus passive distinction, contributory negligence, assumption of the risk, and damages rules; the duty to warn of health care providers; the availability of governmental immunity for public hospitals; and the availability of assumption of the risk in cases in which patients select care that falls outside the standard of care.

RECEPTION FOR AALS FELLOWS

Port & Starboard, Riverside Building, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

The AALS Fellows Program was established in 2017 to strengthen the AALS for future generations of law school faculty and to enrich the profession by engaging leading faculty more deeply in the work of AALS. Fellows receive timely communications and briefings about law school activities and programs. All faculty are welcome to join the reception to help celebrate the generosity of the Fellows.

Contributions from AALS Fellows support activities that benefit all law schools and ensure that AALS is in the strongest position possible to serve our law schools and faculty as we navigate the challenges ahead. Membership in the Fellows program is open to any law school teacher—full-time, part-time, current, retired, and adjunct.

AALS SITE EVALUATION WORKSHOP*Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside*

- Moderator: Austen L. Parrish, Indiana University Maurer School of Law
- Speakers: William E. Adams, Jr., Deputy Managing Director, American Bar Association Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar
Judith Areen, Executive Director, Association of American Law Schools
Barbara J. Cox, California Western School of Law
Cara McQuitty, Membership Review and Programs Coordinator, Association of American Law Schools
Barbara Studenmund, Financial Officer and Director of Membership Review, Association of American Law Schools

Member law schools receive comprehensive periodic visits by site teams made up of law professors, university administrators, and practitioners/judges as part of the ABA accreditation/AALS membership review process. The AALS appoints one member (the AALS reporter) to the ABA/AALS site team. The reporter is a member of the joint team and also writes an additional report for the AALS focusing on the organization's core values. This workshop is designed for those who serve, or are interested in serving, as the AALS reporter, as well as schools that will be visited in the coming academic year. Speakers will discuss AALS core values, materials available to the AALS reporter, the site visit and membership review process, and the AALS questionnaire schools must complete prior to a site visit. The workshop also provides essential information about the ABA accreditation process, as the AALS reporter also functions as a full member of the site team and will have responsibility for a portion of the ABA report.

8:30 am – 4:15 pm

WORKSHOP FOR PRETENURED LAW SCHOOL TEACHERS OF COLOR*Kabacoff, Riverside Building, Hilton New Orleans Riverside*

AALS thanks the Law School Admissions Council for generously supporting the Pretenured Law School Teacher of Color Workshop

For sessions and speaker details, please see the complete listing under extended programs on page 114.

Many minority law professors embark upon a career as a law teacher to have a positive impact upon students, to pursue justice and to transform the legal system in order to improve lives and communities. They often discover that they face special challenges in the legal academy, starting from their first day of teaching. At this workshop, diverse panels of experienced and successful law professors will talk about their goals and achievements as law teachers and legal scholars and offer ways to successfully meet these challenges as they arise in the context of scholarship, teaching, service, and the tenure process. By bringing together faculty who are navigating similar career paths, the workshop will facilitate relationships that can provide long-term sources of support.

Grand Salon Section 12, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Retreat from the Coasts?

Moderator: Paul J. Boudreaux, Stetson University College of Law

Speakers: Maxine Burkett, University of Hawaii, William S. Richardson School of Law
J. Peter Byrne, Georgetown University Law Center
Victor B. Flatt, University of Houston Law Center
Robert R.M. Verchick, Loyola University New Orleans College of Law

Should we “retreat” from the coasts? Relenting rising sea levels, dangerous storms, and growing coastal flooding all require us to rethink our construction near the coasts. How could law effect a retreat from the coasts? Should governments try to prohibit new construction? Should law attempt to remove people from low-lying areas? Should it use eminent domain? Insurance reform? Other carrots or sticks? What about property rights and constitutional claims? This panel brings together a group of noted and diverse scholars who have written and thought seriously about the complex issues surrounding a possible retreat from the coasts, in New Orleans, where the dangers are visible every day.

Rural Access to Justice

Moderator: Danielle M. Conway, University of Maine School of Law

Speakers: Andrew Ayers, Albany Law School
Luz E. Herrera, Texas A&M University School of Law
Camille K. Pannu, University of California, Davis, School of Law
Lauren Sudeall, Georgia State University College of Law

Rural America has an access to justice problem. The existence of the lawyer shortage is becoming well-known, but the extent of that shortage, the populations it affects the most, and possible solutions are often underexplored and misunderstood by the legal academy. This program showcases different regions of the country, different types of states, different minority communities and the particular barriers they face, and different areas of law where access to justice poses significant challenges. This panel will bring these issues to the forefront, particularly for those in the legal academy who have not yet contemplated the access to justice issues that exist in rural America.

Deep currents underlie the fissures of race and class in this country. Defined by conquest, slavery, and immigration, these fault lines have persisted through segregation, civil rights, and reverse discrimination. Their current manifestations—the browning of America and reign of the 1%—once again call our national identity into question: as a white plutocracy or as a multiracial democracy. In this discussion group, dispute resolution, First Amendment, professional responsibility, race, and social justice scholars will interrogate how the confines of law and lawyering limit dialogue to liberal legalist premises. What lies beyond the call for civility, moderation, common ground, and the peaceful, orderly resolution of irreconcilable values? What do these mean in an era of political polarization and resistance? How do we, as law teachers and lawyers, navigate our roles as intellectuals, dispute resolution professionals, constitutional guardians, and social justice advocates and forge a path in the multiracial, egalitarian tradition?

Grand Salon Section 10, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Technology, Inequality, and Rule of Law in Africa

Moderator: Naomi R. Cahn, The George Washington University Law School

Speakers: Olufunmilayo B. Arewa, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law
Ruth L. Okediji, Harvard Law School

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Jake Okechukwu Effoduh, Ph.D. Candidate, York College of Law

A technology revolution has swept across Sub-Saharan Africa in recent years, particularly evident in the diffusion of disruptive technologies, including in the much-discussed mobile technology sector. These technologies have unfolded in broader cultural, political, and technological contexts shaped by varied histories and relationships. This panel will address implications of technology in Africa for questions of inequality and rule of law.

SECTION ON ART LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY

The Use (and Abuse) of Trademarks in Art: Referential Uses, Lazy Art, and Cultural Salience

Moderator: Irene Calboli, Texas A&M University School of Law

Speakers: Megan Carpenter, University of New Hampshire School of Law
Christine Haight Farley, American University, Washington College of Law
Deborah Gerhardt, University of North Carolina School of Law
Justin Hughes, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles
Mary LaFrance, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, William S. Boyd School of Law
Jeremy N. Sheff, St. John's University School of Law

Trademarks are ubiquitous in our society. As a result, artists frequently refer to trademarks in their works. Some artistic uses may be considered descriptive or nominative—as when a painting of an urban landscape includes trademarks. Other uses are more expressive, as when artists make a trademark the focus of their works. When trademark owners have sued over such uses, courts have often (but not always) sided with the artist. What accounts for the increasing use of trademarks in art? Are there artistic uses of trademarks that are not fair uses and, if so, when? How often are artists settling claims or avoiding use of trademarked images because of fear of lawsuit? This panel will address these issues. Speakers will discuss recent cases and offer a variety of perspectives, from the side of artists, legal professionals, and trademark owners.

The 2019 Call for Papers selected four outstanding papers to present at the section's program. These four papers represent a rich array of issues: administrative law in Taiwan, plea bargaining in US, South Korea and Japan; sustainable finance and banking regulation in China, and legal fallout from the Fukushima nuclear meltdown. The program will address issues in a variety of East Asian countries (China, Japan, South Korea, Taiwan), allowing the audience to explore comparative aspects of these topics. A common theme of all four papers is the importance of exploring not only the formal law but the practice in the area.

Access + Opportunity + Choice: Housing Capital, Equity, & Market Regulation in the Trump Era

Moderator: Christopher K. Odinet, University of Oklahoma College of Law

Speakers: Rigel C. Oliveri, University of Missouri School of Law
David J. Reiss, Brooklyn Law School
Todd J. Zywicki, Antonin Scalia Law School at George Mason University

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Vincent DiLorenzo, St. John's University School of Law
Yxta Murray, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

The year 2018 marked the 10th anniversary of the 2008 housing crisis—an event described as the most significant financial and economic upheaval since the Great Depression. The year 2018 was also the 50th anniversary of the Fair Housing Act, which upended many decades of overt housing discrimination. Both events remind us of the significant role that housing has played in the American story—both for good and for bad. Despite the many financial reforms that followed 2008, meaningful housing reform remains elusive. None of the major candidates in the most recent presidential election truly addressed the issue in their policy platforms, and a lack of movement in resolving the Fannie/Freddie conservatorship is viewed as a major Obama administration failure. Additionally, housing segregation and access to affordable mortgage credit continues to plague the American economy. The program looks to explore these and related issues in the age of Trump.

Evaluating Law Review Practices

Moderator: Kish Parella, Washington and Lee University School of Law

Speakers: Mario L. Barnes, University of Washington School of Law
Dawn Chutkow, Cornell Law School
Kendra Doty, Senior Articles Editor for Northwestern University Law Review, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
Brian Galle, Georgetown University Law Center

This session explores a number of trends among law reviews, including anonymized submissions, peer review practices, exclusive submission processes, acceptance windows, and conditions for review, among others. Panelists will offer perspectives on whether these and other trends improve the law review process for authors and editors. After remarks from our panelists, we look forward to a discussion among panelists and audience members regarding “best practices” for law reviews and authors and the role of the AALS for developing and promoting these practices. Commerce, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Blockchain and Cryptocurrencies

Moderator: Eric C. Chaffee, University of Toledo College of Law

Speakers: Carla L. Reyes, Michigan State University College of Law
Angela Walch, St. Mary's University School of Law

The panel will explore emerging trends pertaining to blockchain solutions across industries and cryptocurrency implementation efforts. The rapid evolution of the market for blockchain technology solutions and cryptocurrencies has caused regulators to identify potential risks and possible liabilities. So far, both the SEC and CFTC have asserted jurisdiction over cryptocurrencies, but they have yet to define the scope or nature of their purported regulatory oversight.

Business Trusts: Facilitating Market Transactions and Building Bridges Between Legal Systems

Moderator: Daniel B. Kelly, Notre Dame Law School

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Peter B. Oh, University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Carla L. Reyes, Michigan State University College of Law
Ryan Scott Teschner, Product Manager, Rheem Manufacturing
Lee-ford Tritt, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

In addition to facilitating gratuitous transfers, trusts play a major role in commercial transactions. These “business trusts” are the preferred form of organization for mutual funds (which hold more than $16 trillion) and are commonly used in asset securitization (an industry worth in excess of $1 trillion), employee pension and retirement accounts (which hold more than $24 trillion), and real estate investment trusts (which comprise over thirty firms on the S&P 500). Until recently, however, there has been little scholarly interest in business trusts, perhaps because they fall in a curricular gap between trusts and estates (where the primary focus is gratuitous transfers) and business associations (where the primary focus is the corporation and partnership). Building off of recent scholarship, this panel will begin to address this gap in the literature by presenting cutting-edge scholarship on business trusts of all types.

 Janet Martinez, Stanford Law School
 Colin Rule, Vice President of Online Dispute Resolution, Tyler Technologies
 Amy J. Schmitz, University of Missouri School of Law
 Jean Sternlight, University of Nevada, Las Vegas, William S. Boyd School of Law

The presenters and commentators on this panel are all involved in a mini virtual symposium being spearheaded and published by the University of Missouri's Journal of Dispute Resolution ("JDR"). The pieces address the "Promise and Pitfalls of Technology in Dispute Resolution," a subject at the crossroads of questions involving access to justice and disruptive technologies. For this issue, JDR will be presenting thought leaders and experts on the topic to generate high-level discussions of how technology, including AI, blockchain, smart contracts, and the like, are impacting dispute resolution. The panel will include presentations by the authors, followed by Q&A and discussion. We anticipate active involvement from audience members.

#MeToo - The Courts, The Academy and Law Firms

- Moderator: Michael H. Schwartz, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
- Speakers: Hilarie Bass, Past-President, American Bar Association and Co-President, Greenburg Traurig
Marguerite Gilles, Law Student, Yale Law School
Gillian L. Lester, Columbia Law School
M. Margaret McKeown, Federal Circuit Judge, United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit
Nicole VanderDoes, Attorney and Consultant

In the wake of the #MeToo movement, courts, law firms, and the academy are taking a serious look at how they address workplace conduct, including bullying and sexual harassment. Law firms are improving their practices for addressing the complex issues surrounding harassment. The federal judiciary is revising its ethics codes, stepping up training, and revamping its procedures for investigating complaints. Law schools are engaging with their students on this issue like never before. The key challenges remain the significant power disparities and the chilling effect of reporting. Law schools are in a unique position to serve as a bridge between students and the greater legal community to help reduce these risks. This panel will discuss practical and novel ways that law schools can partner with the courts and the legal community to address these issues. This discussion will also include the important voice of someone who has experienced sexual harassment.

Discussion Group Moderator:

Roberto L. Corrada, University of Denver Sturm College of Law
Sital Kalantry, Cornell Law School
Renee Newman Knake, University of Houston Law Center
Dionne L. Koller, University of Baltimore School of Law
Harold Lloyd, Wake Forest University School of Law
Andrea McArdle, City University of New York School of Law

Amy E. Sloan, University of Baltimore School of Law
Craig T. Smith, University of North Carolina School of Law
Etienne C. Toussaint, University of the District of Columbia, David A. Clarke School of Law

The ABA and the legal profession increasingly call for law school graduates to be practice ready. Despite the Carnegie Report's recommendation for legal education to more fully integrate skills, professionalism, and doctrine, years later many law schools continue to offer separate skills courses and traditional "podium courses," with little intersection of the two. Why do doctrine and skills remain so separate in legal education? What have law schools done to reform their curricula to allow students to learn law in a practical context? This Discussion Group will provide a forum for sharing how some law schools are bridging the gap by incorporating legal writing, simulations, client-based programs, or other experiential learning opportunities into traditional doctrinal courses. Topics include pedagogy, benefits and challenges of integrating skills and doctrine, and whether the legal academy's longstanding divide between podium and practice best serves our students and our profession.

Grand Salon Section 12, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Criminal Justice Reform Consensus?

Moderator: Steven L. Chanenson, Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law

Speakers: Andrea Armstrong, Loyola University New Orleans College of Law
Douglas A. Berman, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz
College of Law
Jelani F. Jefferson Exum, University of Toledo College of Law
Jalila Jefferson-Bullock, Duquesne University School of Law

This panel will explore recent criminal justice developments—both legislative and initiative—defining the landscape for future reform efforts. We will discuss among other topics, the federal FIRST STEP Act (Formerly Incarcerated Reenter Society Transformed Safely Transitioning Every Person Act), which could soon be passed by Congress, and Ohio's Ballot Issue 1 which voters recently rejected by a significant margin. The federal FIRST STEP Act, which received overwhelming bipartisan support in a House vote this past summer, focuses on correctional reform but has been criticized by reform advocates for not including significant sentencing reform provisions. Ohio's Issue 1, a proposed amendment to the Ohio constitution, sought to reduce incarceration levels by reducing drug possession offenses to misdemeanors and by increasing prisoner opportunities for earned-time sentence reductions, with prison savings to be earmarked for drug treatment, crime victim, and rehabilitation programs.

Biosecurity Law: Keeping up with Biotechnology

Moderator: Jordan Paradise, Loyola University Chicago School of Law

Speakers: Robert A. Bohrer, California Western School of Law
Victoria Sutton, Texas Tech University School of Law

The threat of a global pandemic, from emerging infectious diseases like Ebola and Zika, the lone bioterrorist or the nation-state bioweapons program, have all shaped the growing area of biosecurity law. This panel will explore recent developments in biotechnology and how biosecurity law and national security law can address these challenges.

SECTION ON EUROPEAN LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY AFRICA

Grand Salon Section 7, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Judicial Diversity in Transnational Courts

Moderator: Mathilde Cohen, University of Connecticut School of Law

Speakers: Laurence Burgorgue-Larsen, Professor of Law, Université de Paris I Pantheon-Sorbonne Droit des Affaires
Josephine Jarpa Dawuni, Assistant Professor of Political Science, Howard University
Sally Kenney, Tulane University Law School
Iyiola Solanke, Professor of European Union Law and Social Justice, University of Leeds

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Konstantinos Alexandris Polomarkakis, Lecturer in Law, University of Lincoln Faculty of Social Sciences and Law
Kathryn M. Stanchi, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law

Why do so few women and people of color serve on transnational courts and tribunals? Given the paucity of seats available to each nation on the international bench, it should be easy for states to nominate, vote, or appoint them in greater numbers. Yet, despite a series of initiatives to increase gender parity, women, particularly women of color, continue to be conspicuously underrepresented on these courts. Why does it matter? There is now an extensive body of scholarship discussing the reasons why domestic judiciaries might strive for more diversity, including increased legitimacy, dispelling stereotypes, higher quality decision-making and outcomes, and internal institutional change. Are there additional, specific benefits to greater judicial diversity to be expected at the transnational level? Convening leading scholars in the fields of equality law and transnational courts, this panel will address these questions with a special focus on European and African regional courts.

Business meeting will be held during the section luncheon on Saturday, January 5, 2019 from 12:15 pm – 1:30 pm.

10:30 am – 12:15 pm

SECTION ON EVIDENCE, CO-SPONSORED BY MINORITY GROUPS

Bias in the Courtroom

Moderator: Tamara F. Lawson, St. Thomas University School of Law

Speakers: Christine Chambers Goodman, Pepperdine University School of Law
David A. Harris, University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Brooks R. Holland, Gonzaga University School of Law
Colin Miller, University of South Carolina School of Law
Christian Brook Sundquist, Albany Law School

The presence of bias in the courtroom has the potential to undermine public faith in the adversarial process, distort trial outcomes, and obfuscate the search for justice. In Pena-Rodriguez v. Colorado, the United States Supreme Court recently held for the first time that the Sixth Amendment required post-verdict judicial inquiry in criminal cases where racial bias clearly served as a “significant motivating factor” in juror decision-making. This panel will examine the manner in which identity bias seeps into civil and criminal trials in the United States, the extent to which such bias impacts jury and judicial decision-making, and the adequacy of evidentiary rules and constitutional doctrine to ensure just trial outcomes. Post- Foster v. Chapman, the panel will consider how prosecutors are being trained to ensure Batson requirements prohibiting racial bias does not play a role in selecting the jury.

Parents’ and Children’s Rights in a Post-Obergefell World

Moderator: Cynthia M. Godsoe, Brooklyn Law School

Speakers: Michael J. Higdon, University of Tennessee College of Law
 Melanie B. Jacobs, Michigan State University College of Law
 Tanya M. Washington, Georgia State University College of Law

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Jamie Rene Abrams, University of Louisville, Louis D. Brandeis School of Law
 Gregg Strauss, University of Virginia School of Law

Recent family law discussions have largely centered on adult intimate relationships, overlooking the significant changes also occurring in the parent-child dyad. This panel will focus on the interplay between parents’ and children’s relational rights, and how these have evolved to reflect demographic realities, new understandings of childhood and adolescent development, and the sea change in marriage jurisprudence. Topics may include definitions of parenthood, including context and number of parents; the balance between parental obligations and rights; the relationship between marriage and cohabitation and parenthood; as well as children’s rights to a voice and influence in their relationships with adults, their own education, and their discipline/freedom from harm.

SECTION ON FOR THE LAW SCHOOL DEAN

Law Schools and the New Accountability Paradigm

Moderator: Anthony W. Crowell, New York Law School

Speakers: Leonard M. Baynes, University of Houston Law Center
Melanie B. Leslie, Benjamin N. Cardozo School of Law
Michael P. Scharf, Case Western Reserve University School of Law
Kelly S. Terry, University of Arkansas at Little Rock, William H. Bowen School of Law

To help law schools live up to the new ABA transparency and accountability principles, deans, administrators, and faculties need to refine their approaches to shared governance to ensure that the new accreditation expectations permeate the learning outcomes we seek for our students and all areas of law school administration. While many law schools have begun to undertake this process, others are still a work in progress. This workshop aims to help deans, administrators, and faculty leaders understand what's required, what's at stake, and how to plan effectively for the new paradigm. This session will: outline and discuss the most significant changes in accreditation standards, compliance reporting requirements, and rankings formulae and their implications for law school administration and pedagogy; offer management, planning, and communications strategies to assist deans and prospective deans in identifying and working with stakeholders, implementing the standards, promoting transparency, and ensuring effective communication; and present case studies.

SECTION ON IMMIGRATION LAW

Immigration Law Values

Speakers: Elizabeth F. Cohen, Associate Professor, Political Science, The Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs of Syracuse University
Kit Johnson, University of Oklahoma College of Law
Anil Kalhan, Drexel University Thomas R. Kline School of Law

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Steven Bender, Seattle University School of Law
Christopher Lasch, University of Denver Sturm College of Law

The Trump presidency has sought to comprehensively dismantle mechanisms that welcome, value, and integrate immigrants in favor of a stance maintaining that the United States does not welcome or value immigrants—thereby calling into question basic principles that many have believed to have long since been resolved and settled. But the values implicated by immigration law are complex and difficult to define. While the United States has long proclaimed to be a “nation of immigrants,” immigration law has always sent conflicting signals. This session will examine fundamental values of contemporary immigration law and examine immigration law values past, present, and future. The session will also explore whether there are values not currently be understood as settled principles that should be. For example, is immigration law immoral if it results in separation of families? Does immigration adjudication meet basic norms of fairness? What would make immigration law closer to realizing immigration ideals?

SECTION ON INTERNATIONAL HUMAN RIGHTS, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW & THE SOCIAL SCIENCES

Grand Salon Section 4, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Empirical Approaches to Human Rights Law and the Rise of ‘Indicators’

Moderator: Sharmila Murthy, Suffolk University Law School

Speakers: Margaret L. Satterthwaite, New York University School of Law
Beth Simmons, University of Pennsylvania Law School

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Erika George, University of Utah, S. J. Quinney College of Law
Arlene S. Kanter, Syracuse University College of Law
Catherine Powell, Fordham University School of Law

In an era where facts are frequently replaced with “alternative” facts, there is a growing need for empirical approaches to the study of law. With the changing role of the U.S. in the global arena, this is especially true in the field of international human rights. How can one country’s compliance with complex human rights treaty obligations be measured and compared with those of other countries? At the intersection of law and social science, human rights indicators involve the translation of legal obligations into quantitative or qualitative metrics, which then allow countries to be compared with one another over time. This panel seeks to contribute to the growing debate over how human rights indicators can and should be used to identify human rights violations and to assess progress with treaty obligations over time.

SECTION ON LAW & MENTAL DISABILITY

Grand Salon Section 6, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Legal Solutions to Meeting the Mental Health Needs of our Most Vulnerable Populations

Moderator and Speaker:

Jennifer S. Bard, University of Cincinnati College of Law

Speakers: Leo Beletsky, Northeastern University School of Law
Jasmine Elwick Harris, University of California, Davis, School of Law
Jennifer D. Oliva, West Virginia University College of Law

The social and medical support infrastructure of the United States is broken and a rising death toll from “diseases of despair” are the unsurprising result. In particular, the services available to individuals with serious mental illness and disabilities are inadequate, verging on non-existent. Increasingly, individuals presenting with symptoms of mental illness or disability are too often diverted into the criminal justice system. These diversions disproportionately affect populations already among the most vulnerable, including veterans, under-represented minorities, and individuals with opioid use disorder. This panel

SECTION ON LAW & RELIGION, CO-SPONSORED BY CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Free Exercise of Religion and Freedom of Speech

Moderator: Michael P. Moreland, Villanova University Charles Widger School of Law

Speakers: Perry Dane, Rutgers Law School
Erica Goldberg, University of Dayton School of Law
William P. Marshall, University of North Carolina School of Law
Michael W. McConnell, Stanford Law School

Free exercise of religion and freedom of speech are both protected by the First Amendment, but how are they related? Prominent recent cases such as Masterpiece Cakeshop v. Colorado Civil Rights Commission and NIFLA v. Becerra raised claims about religiously motivated speech, and this program will explore the historical, theoretical, and doctrinal relation between freedom of speech and free exercise of religion. Among the topics addressed will be the significant doctrinal differences between constitutional claims for free speech and free exercise, the argument that free speech and free exercise are in some sense reducible to each other, the historical development of freedom of speech and religious free exercise in political theory and American constitutional law, and the current view that some values (such as anti-discrimination norms or protection against hate speech) should outweigh rights of free speech or freedom of religion.

Trade and Investment Across Asia

Moderator: Afra Afsharipour, University of California, Davis, School of Law

Speakers: Adam K. Feibelman, Tulane University Law School
Manoj Mate, University of California, Irvine School of Law
Srividhya Ragavan, Texas A&M University School of Law
Gregory C. Shaffer, University of California, Irvine School of Law
Peter K. Yu, Texas A&M University School of Law

The past year has seen numerous shifts in international trade and investment globally. With the United States' withdrawal from the Trans Pacific Partnership and increasing rumbles of protectionism in U.S. policy toward Asian nations, the current state of global trade and investment in Asia is in flux. This panel will explore a broad range of issues dealing with trade and foreign investment across Asia, including the shift toward multilateral regional trade agreements (TPP, RCEP, APEC) and bilateral trade agreements, and multilateral and bilateral investment treaties and agreements including the 1987 and 2009 ASEAN agreements. The panel will explore cutting edge developments including new treaties and agreements covering goods and services, intellectual property rights, agriculture, and foreign direct investment. Panelists will explore the implications of these trends for national and regional economic development, and trade with other global regions.

SECTION ON TAXATION, CO-SPONSORED BY LEGISLATION & LAW OF THE POLITICAL PROCESS AND TRUST & ESTATES

The 2017 Tax Changes – One Year Later

Moderator: Shu-Yi Oei, Boston College Law School

Speakers: Karen C. Burke, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law
Ajay K. Mehrotra, Director, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
Leigh Osofsky, University of North Carolina School of Law
Daniel N. Shaviro, New York University School of Law

Congress passed H.R. 1, a major piece of tax legislation, at the end of 2017. The new law made important changes to the individual, business, and cross-border business taxation. This panel will discuss the changes and the issues and questions that have arisen with respect to the new legislation over the past year. Panelists will address several topics, including international tax reform, choice-of-entity, the new qualified business income deduction (§ 199A), federal-state dynamics, budgetary and distributional impacts, the state of regulatory guidance, technical corrections and interpretive issues, and the possibility of follow-on legislation.

Moderator: Leticia Saucedo, University of California, Davis, School of Law

Speakers: Tamar Bircckhead, Parrett, Porto, Parese & Colwell, P.C.
Kenneth H. Bobroff, University of New Mexico School of Law
Nekima V. Levy-Pounds, Principal Consultant and Co-Owner, Black Pearl
Pamela R. Metzger, Southern Methodist University, Dedman School of Law
Janai S. Nelson, Associate Director-Counsel, NAACP Legal Defense Fund, Inc.
Mae C. Quinn, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law

In this session, current and former law faculty members will discuss being “called” to more fully embrace advocacy roles, reform efforts, and racial justice work outside of traditional or expected law school frameworks, and share lessons learned from their experiences.

Participants will consider the limits of traditional legal academic roles and institutions as sites of activism, as well as unique opportunities offered by these settings. We will further explore the question of whether legal clinics are, or should be, the central location within the academy for reform work and discuss a range of formats for advancing racial and social justice reform, including centers, labs, and interdisciplinary institutes.

The session will further reflect on attrition, asking who seems to be leaving the academy to take on activist and advocacy roles, and consider possible implications for the future composition and complexion of the law school professorate in the days ahead.

AALS HOT TOPIC PROGRAM*Grand Salon Section 7, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideNAFTA 2.0: Are We Building or Burning Bridges With USMCA?*Moderator: Jarrod Wong, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of LawSpeakers: Julian Arato, Brooklyn Law School
Kathleen Claussen, University of Miami School of Law
Christine Haight Farley, American University, Washington College of Law
Elizabeth Trujillo, Texas A&M University School of Law
David Zaring, Assistant Professor of Legal Studies, The Wharton School
University of Pennsylvania Legal Studies and Business Ethics Department

The United States-Mexico-Canada Agreement (USMCA) varies markedly from its predecessor, NAFTA, in its investment, environment, and labor chapters and its treatment of automotive rules of origin, financial services, digital trade, and intellectual property. Some highly controversial revisions include imposing unprecedented wage hour and rule of origin requirements in the automotive sector; establishing new, U.S.-exclusive tariff rate quotas to penetrate Canada's dairy market; reducing dramatically the scope of investor-state dispute settlement (ISDS); and taking aim at China in allowing the termination of USMCA should any state party enter into a Free Trade Agreement (FTA) with a "non-market country." This panel will analyze these changes to consider what impact on trade, investment, regulation, and foreign relations they may have both within and beyond North America. In that process, the panel will compare USMCA to other recent FTAs, including CETA, CPTPP, and what would have been TPP.

Fershee, West Virginia University College of LawSpeakers: Elizabeth Stone Miller, Baylor University School of Law
Thomas E. Rutledge, Member, Stoll Keenon Ogden PLLCSpeaker from a Call for Papers: Christopher G. Bradley, University of Kentucky College of Law

This program will explore the evolution of the limited liability company (LLC), including subjects such as the LLC's rise to prominence as a leading entity choice (including public LLCs and PLLCs), the role and impact of series LLC, and differences in various LLC state law rights and obligations. The program will also consider ethics and professional responsibility and governance issues raised by the LLC. The Section is particularly seeking papers that discuss the role of the LLC as a unique entity (or why it is not).

SECTION ON ANTITRUST & ECONOMIC REGULATION

Grand Salon Section 12, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Antitrust and Two-Sided Markets

Speakers:

Harry First, New York University School of Law
Rebecca Haw Allensworth, Vanderbilt University Law School
John B. Kirkwood, Seattle University School of Law
John M. Newman, The University of Memphis, Cecil C. Humphreys
School of Law
Suzanne Wachsstock, VP and Chief Antitrust Counsel, American Express

American antitrust law came of age in an era when two-sided markets—markets where a firm competes to attract both providers and end users of a product or service—were relatively rare. Now, many of America's biggest and most influential companies are platforms that bring together advertisers and eyeballs, taxi drivers and riders, merchants and purchasers. Competition problems are acute because two-sided products tend to feature network effects, leading to market concentration and entry barriers. Some maintain that market power and anticompetitive effects on one side of a two-sided market can be justified by benefits provided to purchasers on the other side. How can antitrust law be used to protect competition in two-sided markets? Do traditional notions of market power and competitive effects need to be modified for these markets? This panel will feature perspectives on these questions from both academia and legal practice.

Grand Salon Section 15, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Essential Skills: Leadership, Project Management, Communication, and Integrity

Moderator:

Joel A. Nichols, University of St. Thomas School of Law

Speakers:

Judy Perry Martinez, Chair-Elect, American Bar Association

Speakers from a Call for Papers:

Teri D. Baxter, University of Tennessee College of Law
Larry Cunningham, St. John's University School of Law
S. David Mitchell, University of Missouri School of Law
Melinda Molina, Capital University Law School

Faculty members are recruited, retained, and promoted for a particular set of skills, including intellectual curiosity and insight, scholarly ability and ambition, disruptive thinking, pedagogical expertise and potential, and commitment to student success. While Associate Deans are (almost exclusively) selected from among the pool of faculty members, the position of Associate Dean involves a very different, and in some ways incompatible, set of skills. This session focuses on how Associate Deans can develop and apply four essential skills for their work: Leadership, Project Management, Communication, and Integrity. Panelists will discuss each area, provide examples from their own experience of successful (or unsuccessful!) application of those skills, and offer practical suggestions on how to develop and/or improve in these areas. A portion of the session will be dedicated to separate scenario-driven discussion groups and/or mentoring sessions for section members.

SECTION ON COMPARATIVE LAW*Jackson, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideComparative Constitutional Law, Judicial Politics and the Evolving Role of Constitutional Courts*Moderator: Bryant G. Garth, University of California, Irvine School of LawSpeakers: Daniel Brinks, The University of Texas School of Law
Erin F. Delaney, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
Mark S. Kende, Drake University Law School
Manoj Mate, University of California, Irvine School of Law

Constitutional systems across the globe are under increasing strain as they grapple with the rise of nationalist movements, creeping authoritarianism, consolidation and centralization of power, erosion of constitutional rights and decreasing protections for free speech and media rights, systemic corruption and malgovernance, and a broader inability to address and protect social rights, inequality, and human rights. In response, constitutional courts and lower courts have emerged as key sites of contestation by opposition political elites, social movements, and other legal and political actors. This panel will explore current themes and topics related to the significant role of courts in global constitutional governance including constitutional adjudication of major political disputes involving separation of powers, federalism, elections and democratic governance, free speech, constitutional and social rights, and environmental policy and development. The panel will explore the evolving role constitutional courts play globally in advancing constitutionalism, rights, equality, and other structural principles and values.

Areheart, University of Tennessee College of Law
Ruth Colker, The Ohio State University, Michael E. Moritz College of Law
Arlene Mayerson, University of California, Berkeley School of LawSpeaker from a Call for Papers:

Katherine Macfarlane, University of Idaho College of Law

Social movements involve the organizing of individuals with shared identities or shared values around a collective goal, whether to reshape law, policy, the political system, or public image. A variety of social movements have gained ground in recent years, from Black Lives Matters to global marches by women or gun control advocacy by the students of Parkland, with each movement demonstrating new ways to effectively organize in modern society. Disability rights advocates have experienced great success in organizing people with disabilities to advocate for broader social and legal reforms. The panel will bring together disability and legal scholars to discuss disability as a social movement including historical and political context, successes and challenges, comparative studies about what we can learn from other social movements, and what we can expect from the disability rights movement as a social movement in the future.

Navigating Third Party Vendors in Post-Graduate Programs Including Programs for Non-US Lawyers

Moderator: Steven Richman, Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University

Speakers: William H. Byrnes, Texas A&M University School of Law
James Crosset, University of Cincinnati College of Law
Vishnu Prasad, CEO and Managing Partner, Law Pundits LLP
Kenneth C. Randall, CEO and President, iLaw Ventures

This session includes topics examining and assessing 3rd party graduate program relationships, includes the deal terms of these understandings. The speakers will provide practical examples of aggregated and disaggregated models; fees or income/cost share models; the duties of the school and the vendor regarding students (particularly support), administration, and marketing; and a comparison with 'going it alone' upfront or after a buildup period with a 3rd party partner. Extension to agreements within the university, such as career services, writing centers, ESL, etc. (intra-university agreements). Disaggregation of services will consider marketing and recruiting (virtual fairs, digital marketing, international recruiting) and student services and support (ESL programs, online course development, career services).

SECTION ON ISLAMIC LAW, CO-SPONSORED BY LAW & RELIGION AND IMMIGRATION LAW

Grand Salon Section 13, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Asylum and Refugee Rights in Islamic Law

Moderators and Speakers:

Samy Ayoub, The University of Texas School of Law
Adnan Zulfiqar, Rutgers Law School

Speakers: Sahar Aziz, Rutgers Law School
Haider Ala Hamoudi, University of Pittsburgh School of Law
Leonard Wood, Associate Attorney, Sidley Austin LLP

This is a two-panel session. The first will feature Dr. Leonard Wood, who recently published a book on legal education in modern Egypt, and another scholar who will offer some reflections on the work and engage in conversations with the author as well as the audience. The second panel will discuss asylum and refugee rights in Islamic law. The Muslim world today is currently experiencing the greatest rate of refugee movement in the world. This will allow us to explore historical and contemporary discourses on migration and refugee rights.

Christopher T. Robertson, The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law
Mary Szto, Mitchell Hamline School of LawSpeaker from a Call for Papers:

Rebecca M. Bratspies, City University of New York School of Law

How does government corruption work and what effects does it have? Equally importantly, what constitutes corruption in any given society, and how do we recognize corruption's inverse legitimation? The panel seeks to address these questions from a range of methodological and disciplinary perspectives. Papers discuss, among other topics, local perceptions of government action; the conditions for its validity in particular places; debates in legal, scholarly, or popular work about what constitutes corruption; as well as research analyzing recognized corruption and its effects. We hope this panel will lead to a stimulating discussion about both the corruption in government and the malleability of the very concept of corruption.

SECTION ON LAW & INTERPRETATION*Commerce, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideCorpus Linguistics: The Search for Objective Interpretation*Moderator: Francis J. Mootz, III, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of LawSpeaker: Thomas R. Lee, Associate Justice, Utah Supreme CourtSpeakers from a Call for Papers:Tammy Gales, Ph.D., Associate Professor, Hofstra University, Department of Comparative Literature, Languages, and Linguistics
Stefan Th. Gries, Professor, UC Santa Barbara Department of Linguistics
Carissa Byrne Hessick, University of North Carolina School of Law
Brian G. Slocum, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
Evan C. Zoldan, University of Toledo College of Law

This panel will assess the relevance and promise of corpus linguistics as an objective method to determine legal meaning. The keynote speaker, Justice Thomas Lee, is a sitting state supreme court judge who co-authored a Yale Law Journal article that makes the case for corpus analysis. Four papers will be presented in response, drawn from submissions to a call for papers. The presenters are law professors and professors of linguistics, each with a different perspective on the question. The panel will reserve sufficient time for robust dialogue with the audience.

SECTIONS ON LEGAL HISTORY AND LAW & THE HUMANITIES JOINT PROGRAM

Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Confronting the History and Memory of Injustice in the Public Square

Moderator: Brian Soucek, University of California, Davis, School of Law

Speakers: Guy-Uriel E. Charles, Duke University School of Law
Sanford Levinson, The University of Texas School of Law
Judith Resnik, Yale Law School
Sia Sanneh, Senior Attorney, Equal Justice Initiative
Allison Tait, The University of Richmond School of Law
John F. Witt, Yale Law School

This panel's goals are to explore the uses and understandings of art, monuments, and memorials in the public space. Panelists will discuss the many histories represented in public squares, parks, courthouses, and museums. The questions include both how these material projects are understood by producers of the objects and by those who observe them, including those who see themselves represented (or not) in the built landscape. What claims and whose claims to the public space are on display? When, where, and how does the violence of history get inscribed or erased? And today, what are the options to express the concerns and to question, evaluate, reframe, and alter these various depictions so as to provide accountings of the histories while acknowledging the roles played by domination, discrimination, and reconstruction?

To what extent are decisions of federal courts binding on the legislative and executive branches of the federal government? Rarely have the other branches flouted court decisions, but most scholars believe that the Framers did not contemplate that the other branches were obliged to submit to judicial interpretations of the law, including the Constitution. That a handful of unelected judges with lifetime tenure could impose their decisions on the entire nation is arguably inconsistent with democratic government. However, if the elected branches of government can ignore judicial decrees, the promise of the Constitution to protect minorities from the politically ascendant faction of the moment may be broken. The possibility that each branch might persist in its own interpretation of the law also raises the prospect of confusion arising from conflicting commands.

Jane K. Stoeber, University of California, Irvine School of Law

The pace of the practice of law—specifically the introduction of technologies to manage the practice—may be a change in the legal profession that favors the competence of our students over ours. Moreover, the practice of law is increasingly interdisciplinary, and many of our student bodies reflect diverse points of intersection with the law. In this session, we will discuss how we can educate ourselves to better educate our students to fully understand the current practice of law. Our discussion will focus on how technologies including social media, electronic communication, and data management have affected the legal practice. We will also discuss the emergence of interdisciplinary approaches to advocating for change, which include the practice of law but do not privilege that skill set or perspective above the contributions of other professions.

Building Bridges: Examining Race and Privilege in Community Economic Development

Discussion Group Moderator:

Renee Hatcher, The John Marshall Law School

Discussion Group Participants:

Michele Alexandre, University of Mississippi School of Law
Priya Baskaran, West Virginia University College of Law
Susan D. Bennett, American University, Washington College of Law
Sheryll D. Cashin, Georgetown University Law Center
Patience A. Crowder, University of Denver Sturm College of Law
Scott L. Cummings, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

Lynnise E. Phillips Pantin, Boston College Law School
Joseph Pileri, American University, Washington College of Law
Anika Singh Lemar, Yale Law School
Dana A. Thompson, The University of Michigan Law School

The goal of this Discussion Group is to identify how community economic development (CED) law school courses, experiential and doctrinal, as well as CED practice generally, serve to build bridges across racial and socioeconomic boundaries. The discussion group will feature presentations by clinicians, non-clinicians, and CED scholars on their current research and thinking. The group will then transition into a larger discussion of attendees, moderators and discussants tackling the following challenging questions:

How does community economic development serve to build bridges in local communities, across social-economic and racial boundaries?

- How does race and privilege affect who benefits from community economic development initiatives?
- How does the racial wealth gap disadvantage minority entrepreneurs?
- What are the factors of assessment and measurement for successful CED initiatives?

This discussion will review the ways in which CED can both exacerbate and alleviate racial and socioeconomic inequality. The moderators will pose the questions identified above to the discussants in an effort to draw out common themes. In addition, the moderators will encourage input from the attendees by encouraging questions and posing questions to the broader audience.

SECTION ON ART LAW*Grand Salon Section 22, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideArt and Cultural Industries: What Role for Intellectual Property and Copyright Law?*Moderator: Irene Calboli, Texas A&M University School of Law

 June Besek, Columbia Law School
 Emily Lanza, Counsel, Policy & International Affairs, United States Copyright Office
 Lateef Mtima, Howard University School of Law
 Elizabeth Townsend Gard, Tulane University Law School
 Michele Woods, Director of the Copyright Law Division, World Intellectual Property Organization

This panel gathers experts to discuss the role of IP and copyright law in developing cultural industries. This discussion is increasingly important in the U.S. and worldwide. The role of IP and copyright protection in this context have been addressed before, but the scope of this protection is far from settled. As culture is never static, how this protection relates to the notion of cultural identities, aesthetics and creative industries is significant. Speakers will address questions such as: should IP and copyright protection be further introduced into the broad policies and management perspectives of all cultural industries? Could this protection assist in ensuring a more effective industry wide development with respect to the broadest set of cultural assets, including TCEs? And to what extent could artists and creators, and their managers, use traditional channels as well as new platforms in media technology to promote cultural industries?

SECTION ON BALANCE IN LEGAL EDUCATION*Grand Salon Section 24, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideBuilding Bridges from Undergraduate Experience to Law School*Moderator: Jarrod F. Reich, Georgetown University Law Center

Speakers: Julie A. Baker, University of Massachusetts School of Law – Dartmouth
 Rebecca C. Flanagan, University of Massachusetts School of Law – Dartmouth
 Nancy A. Oliver, University of Cincinnati College of Law
 Sofia Yakren, City University of New York School of Law

Although our students have diverse educational and professional experiences, nearly all encounter difficulties transitioning to the law school environment. While the nature of legal education can exacerbate these difficulties, professors and administrators can work toward easing this transition. Through this program, panelists will address pedagogical and other techniques to help bridge the gap between students' prior experiences and law school so that they attain and refine the skills and the resilience necessary to thrive and succeed in law school and beyond.

Wendy Greene, Samford University, Cumberland School of Law
Tamara F. Lawson, St. Thomas University School of Law

Bias, whether explicit or implicit, distorts and limits socio-economic opportunity in many ways and contexts. When implicit, rather than explicit, its cumulative impact is often unrecognized, unacknowledged, and marginalized. This panel will explore how implicit bias impacts our everyday socio-economic interactions. Specifically, the need to make explicit the reality and consequences of implicit bias will be critically examined in areas including education, fundraising, career counseling, and the justice system.

AALS RECEPTION FOR LEGAL EDUCATORS FROM LAW SCHOOLS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES

Fulton, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Law increasingly exists in a global context, both in the delivery of legal services and legal education itself. As educators, we aspire to help students develop the global competencies and connections needed for them to take part fully in the future of the legal profession. A more international perspective can also enrich our own scholarship and teaching. AALS invites legal educators from outside the United States to attend this reception held in their honor. The reception will provide an opportunity to mingle with colleagues from law schools all around the globe and forge important potential partnerships and connections.

Speakers:

Josh Albertson, Section Services Manager, Association of American Law Schools

Judith Areen, Executive Director, Association of American Law Schools

Anita K. Krug, University of Washington School of Law

All Section Officers are encouraged to attend this breakfast. We especially recommend Chairs and Chair-Elects be in attendance. At this year's program, AALS President-Elect Vicki Jackson will discuss her theme for the 2020 Annual Meeting. AALS Section Services Manager Josh Albertson will review the 2019 Section Officer's Planning Guide and answer any questions Section Officers may have.

In addition, the AALS is delighted to honor the winner of the Section of the Year Award to the Section on Alternative Dispute Resolution.

The Section of the Year Award recognizes excellence in member support and other activities that promote AALS's core values. Activities may include: annual meeting programming, facilitating outstanding scholarship, providing teaching support and course materials, community/pro bono service, engagement with the bar and bench, mentoring programs, expanding membership and member engagement, creative use of technology, and more.

AALS OPEN SOURCE PROGRAM*Grand Salon Section 15, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans RiversideEnergy Justice and the Green Energy Transition

Speakers: Shalanda H. Baker, Northeastern University School of Law
Carmen G. Gonzalez, Seattle University School of Law
Elizabeth A. Kronk Warner, University of Kansas School of Law
Uma Outka, University of Kansas School of Law

Climate change is one of the most pressing social justice issues of our time. Climate change has triggered unprecedented investment in renewable energy. However, these investments may replicate the injustices of fossil fuel-based energy systems if they are not informed by the concept of energy justice. This panel breaks new ground by examining a range of energy justice regulatory challenges from the perspective of international law, U.S. law, and foreign domestic law. The panel will analyze the under-theorized concept of energy justice and explain how energy justice might be applied in practice. The panel will also discuss how energy justice intersects with environmental justice, human rights, climate justice, indigenous rights, and energy democracy. The goal is to invite further engagement with these linkages and to underscore the pressing need for practical solutions.

Steven H. Hobbs, Hugh F. Culverhouse Jr. School of Law at The University of Alabama
Ann C. Hodges, The University of Richmond School of Law
Francisco X. Valdes, University of Miami School of Law

This program focuses on how and when to make plans to retire as a law professor. Discussion will encompass emotional and psychological challenges like how do you perceive the “new you”? Another concern involves the impact of your retirement upon the law school and broader community such as remaining faculty, staff, students, and alums.

AALS Arc of Career Program, continued

We expect program attendees to gain:

- A better sense of significant questions to ask while preparing for life beyond the legal academy.
- Further insight into their own aspirations and apprehensions regarding the post legal academy adventure.
- A better appreciation of how personal identity (for example, race, sex, sexual orientation, ideological perspective) impact your decision making process and your experience in transitioning from full time law teaching.
- A preliminary strategy for prioritizing and identifying post legal academy activities.
- A sense of expectation and encouragement regarding the law school professor “afterlife” rather than dread and fear.

SECTION ON CONSTITUTIONAL LAW

Camp, Third Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

100 Years of Incitement

Moderator: India Thusi, California Western School of Law

Speakers: Paul R. Baier, Louisiana State University, Paul M. Hebert Law Center
Leslie G. Jacobs, University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law
John M. Kang, St. Thomas University School of Law
Ian Turner, Ph.D., Reader in Human Rights and Security and Scholar on the International Law Implications of U.S. Incitement Jurisprudence in the War on Terror, University of Central Lancashire Lancashire Law School

This program reflects upon a trio of 1919 case in which the Supreme Court of the United States authorized a lesser standard of First Amendment protection for speech whose aim was to “incite” violence or damage. This program traces this jurisprudence to its architect, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes Jr., who wrote the majority opinion in two cases (Schenck and Debs) and dissented in a third (Abrams). This program considers the implication of Holmes’s incitement jurisprudence, including historic, state-authorized censorship that sometimes disparately impacts based on race, gender, sexual orientation, and class. This program also explores the application of incitement jurisprudence to contemporary issues, including the War on Terror and political speech in 2016 Presidential Election.

SECTION ON EVIDENCE

Problems of Proof: #MeToo and ‘Who Me?’

Speakers: Charles Gibbs, Attorney, McMonagle Perri McHugh Mischak Davis
Christine Chambers Goodman, Pepperdine University School of Law
Aya Gruber, University of Colorado Law School
Catharine A. MacKinnon, The University of Michigan Law School
Sandra C. Munoz, Attorney, Law Offices of Sandra C. Munoz
Deborah Tuerkheimer, Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law
Maggie Wittlin, University of Nebraska College of Law

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Julia Simon-Kerr, University of Connecticut School of Law

The #MeToo movement has galvanized women and women's groups to call out, respond to, and challenge pervasive sexual harassment in workplaces as varied as Uber, Hollywood, and Congress. Charges, as well as civil lawsuits are being filed. But what will happen if and when these cases go to trial? Sexual harassment cases are notoriously "he said, she said," situations subject to the interpretations of the "reasonable" or "objective" person, and social standards and mores about what does and does not cross the line. Recent backlash against what constitutes harassment blurs the lines between actionable wrongs, poor judgment, and bad manners. This panel will examine the evidentiary basis for sexual harassment claims, the problems of proof with credibility issues, the evidentiary standards of civil and criminal cases, and the challenges and opportunities for litigants in the courtroom.

The Realpolitik of Intellectual Property

Moderator: Arti K. Rai, Duke University School of Law

Speakers: Sandra Aistars, Antonin Scalia Law School at George Mason University
Kristen Osenga, The University of Richmond School of Law
Pamela Samuelson, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

Speaker from a Call for Papers:

Jonas Anderson, American University, Washington College of Law

The goal of this panel is to explore pragmatic considerations that influence the creation, debate, and implementation of intellectual property reform proposals into law, regulation, and policy. The panelists will address issues of political economy, legislative bargaining, executive branch agenda-setting, and implications for bilateral and multilateral coordination. The panelists were selected to address a range of topics across intellectual property from diverse viewpoints. In keeping with the Annual Meeting theme, Building Bridges, the Section's executive committee hopes to make this panel a productive conversation about how competing visions and priorities in IP can result in social consensus.

A virtual business meeting was held prior to the Annual Meeting.

Supporting Scholarship to Build Bridges to Our Colleagues, Peers and Students

Moderator: Janet Sinder, Brooklyn Law School

Speakers: Femi Cadmus, Duke University School of Law
Todd G.E. Melnick, Fordham University School of Law
Courtney L. Selby, Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University

In this session, panelists will discuss ways that the law library can support the scholarly mission of the their law schools. Specific topics to be discussed include measuring scholarly impact, promoting and marketing faculty scholarship, open access and repositories, innovations in online bibliographies, and databases of faculty scholarship.

PROGRAM SCHEDULE

8:30 am – 10:15 am

SECTION ON LAW SCHOOL ADMINISTRATION & FINANCE

Elephants in the Room – Financial Challenges (But Possible Opportunities) Facing Every Law School

Moderator: James Crosset, University of Cincinnati College of Law

Speakers: Charles G. Cannon, University of California, Berkeley School of Law
Erica Daley, University of Oregon School of Law
Anthony P. Doyle, Widener University Delaware Law School

This panel discussion will address financial challenges (and possible opportunities) facing every law school. Since the recession a decade ago, the financial impact on law schools has been significant. The challenges have included fewer applicants, fewer lawyer jobs, lower job placement rates, lower net tuition revenue, and increasing costs. This panel will address key areas including financial sustainability (What does a long-term budget plan look like? What are new ideas to control costs?), high tuition discounting (How long can this continue? What is the real cost of law school today?), economic cycles (What could be the financial impact of the next recession? Can we even prepare? Law student applications are up—is the growth here to stay, or is it a temporary Trump bump?), and law school relevance (What are the latest ideas for adding value and/or creating new sources of revenue?).

Business meeting at program conclusion.

Racial and Ethnic Segregation and the Widening Opportunity Gap

Moderator: Akilah N. Folami, Maurice A. Deane School of Law at Hofstra University

Speakers: Mehrsa Baradaran, University of Georgia School of Law
Devon Wayne Carbado, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law
Rachel F. Moran, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

The gaps between rich and poor, the privileged and disadvantaged, and between white communities and communities of color are growing, creating what many argue is our country's defining challenge: the opportunity gap. Long-standing evidence indicates that residential segregation is central to this gap. People who live in communities that are racially segregated and experience concentrated poverty are less likely to possess the assets and resources needed to overcome disadvantage. For a child in a poor neighborhood, it is not only the poor schools, the inadequate health care, lack of economic and social capital, the dearth of affordable and nutritious food, environmental hazards, police violence, and inadequate transportation. It is these factors, working in tandem and reinforcing one another, that conspire against opportunity. This panel will explore how residential segregation and the compounding effects of concentrated poverty and racial inequality become a source of systemic disadvantage.

Johnny D. Pryor, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law

Chasity Q. Thompson, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law

Typically, part-time law students matriculate in our J.D. programs within in a different context than their full-time student peers. Part-time law students often must intentionally and strategically select courses and experiential learning opportunities that allow them to also manage their professional, personal, and family responsibilities with law school. This session will explore ways that faculty, student affairs, and career services professionals can develop and implement advising models and practices that support the success of part-time students. Through a joint presentation and interactive small group work, participants will learn how to use advising and coaching techniques to specifically support part-time students.

Dara E. Purvis, The Pennsylvania State University – Penn State Law

Elizabeth Sepper, Washington University in St. Louis School of Law

Under the eight years of the Obama administration, LGBTQ rights saw increased protection. The early signs from the administration of President Donald Trump indicated a sharply different view of the direction such rights should take, and in some cases represented actual or attempted repudiation of prior rights positions. This roundtable will take stock of the state(s) of LGBTQ rights after very nearly two years of the new administration, addressing topics such as education, family law, healthcare, immigration, military service, protections against workplace discrimination, and religious exemptions.

The Role of Law in Educational (In)equity

Discussion Group Moderator:

Erik Girvan, University of Oregon School of Law

Discussion Group Participants:

Kevin D. Brown, Indiana University Maurer School of Law
Robert A. Garda, Jr., Loyola University New Orleans College of Law
Darrell D. Jackson, University of Wyoming College of Law
Miranda Johnson, Loyola University Chicago School of Law
Twinette L. Johnson, University of the District of Columbia, David A. Clarke School of Law

Daniel Kiel, The University of Memphis, Cecil C. Humphreys School of Law
Laura McNeal, University of Louisville, Louis D. Brandeis School of Law
Jason Nance, University of Florida Fredric G. Levin College of Law
Eloise Pasachoff, Georgetown University Law Center

A core purpose of the education system in the United States is to promote the equal opportunity for children to become responsible, productive, and successful members of society. In many ways it is not only falling short but losing ground. Increasing inequity in academic and discipline outcomes are arguably associated with interpretations of what is and is not a violation of anti-discrimination statutes and regulations. The discussion group is an opportunity for expert legal scholars from a diverse range of backgrounds to have a constructive conversation about the role of the law as a mechanism for or barrier to equity in education. Specific topics for discussion include school segregation, school discipline, the impact of proposals to increase school safety and security in the wake of mass-shootings, the intersection of schools and the criminal justice system more broadly, and other similar subjects implicating racial and ethnic equity in educational opportunity.

Federal and State Comity in the Enforcement of Criminal Laws

Moderator:

Carissa Byrne Hessick, University of North Carolina School of Law

Speakers:

Jennifer M. Chacon, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law
Gabriel “Jack” Chin, University of California, Davis, School of Law
Alex Kreit, Thomas Jefferson School of Law
Robert A. Mikos, Vanderbilt University Law School
Lauren Ouziel, Temple University, James E. Beasley School of Law

Current controversies surrounding immigration enforcement and state decriminalization of marijuana raise questions about the balance of power between federal and state governments. This panel will address the issue of federal and state comity generally and more specifically in the enforcement of immigration laws and drug laws.

Business meeting at program conclusion.

SECTION ON EMPLOYEE BENEFITS & EXECUTIVE COMPENSATION, CO-SPONSORED BY AGING & THE LAW; DISABILITY LAW; AND SECURITIES REGULATION

Grand Salon Section 10, First Floor, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Trust in the Time of Trump: A Comparative Look at Fiduciary Law

Moderator: Kathryn L. Moore, University of Kentucky College of Law

Speakers: Nina A. Kohn, Syracuse University College of Law
 Arthur B. Laby, Rutgers Law School
 Dana Muir, Professor, Business Law, University of Michigan Ross School of Business
 Christopher T. Robertson, The University of Arizona James E. Rogers College of Law
 Natalya Shnitser, Boston College Law School

Fiduciary duties abound throughout the law. Employee benefit plan administrators, investment managers, financial advisors, trustees, executives, directors, controlling shareholders, guardians, physicians, and lawyers, among others, have fiduciary duties. This panel of experts will explore fiduciary obligations in a variety of settings, including the provision of retirement advice, surrogate decision-making, the doctor-patient relationship, and securities regulation in the United States. Panelists will consider how the law is changing and has changed under the Trump Administration.

Speakers: Kristina Campbell, University of the District of Columbia, David A. Clarke School of Law
 Sarah Lamdan, City University of New York School of Law
 Maya Manian, University of San Francisco School of Law
 Mariela Olivares, Howard University School of Law

Recent events highlight the frequent conflict between individual liberty interests and the government's migration control policies. The executive order banning the entry of Muslims into the United States has impinged on religious liberty, freedom to travel, and the liberty interest in family. Immigration detention, now greatly expanded, curtails freedom from physical restraint. "Zero tolerance" border control policies have caused large-scale family separation and detention, placed refugees at risk of refoulement, and infringed upon various rights of the child. Denial of noncitizen minors' access to abortion while in government custody has implicated overlapping liberty interests. This session explores the doctrinal, practical, and theoretical issues arising at the intersection of liberty and

Faisal Kutty, Valparaiso University Law School
Peter Margulies, Roger Williams University School of Law

While hate is certainly not a new phenomenon in the U.S. national security arena, its manifestation as violence and discrimination against particular groups deserves great scrutiny. National security law shouldn't be divorced from the complicated and troubling context in which it exists, and this panel hopes to shed light in this area.

Speakers:Deleso A. Alford, Florida A&M University College of Law
June Rose Carbone, University of Minnesota Law School
Martha Albertson Fineman, Emory University School of Law
Philip L. Harvey, Rutgers Law School
Tayyab Mahmud, Seattle University School of Law

This session explores the goals of greater minority and gender justice and empowerment and their relationship to socio-economic methodology. Socio-economic methodology recognizes that systemic race and gender injustice and the goals of minority and gender empowerment cannot be adequately understood or addressed by a legal analysis limited to the narrow neoclassical approach to law and economics. Would the aforementioned goals be substantially aided if the socio-economic methodology were to become the dominant academic approach to law-related economic issues? The panelists and audience will be invited to share their views.

Understanding the Impact of the Work We Do

Speaker: Anthony Graves, Director, Houston Forensic Science Center

Much of the work our departments do is based on numbers—participation, donors in the door, amount of likes, number of shares, etc.—this pressure makes it easy to lose sight of why we do what we do. It also divides our departments into categories to meet those metrics. This opening plenary is to remind as a whole that we are one group working towards one goal, which is to improve the legal education opportunities at our school, so that we can have a bigger impact.

Circling the Square: Fresh Partnerships to Understand Student Learning and Bar Performance through Empirical Studies

Academic support plays a critical role in promoting student success and learning, and empirical research into various learning processes can yield vital information to help all law faculty promote effective learning. This three-hour workshop features work identified through a call for proposals, many of which addressed learning issues and the bar examination. It includes two plenary panels that feature empirical research on bar examination performance and related issues, followed by eleven concurrent break-out sessions through which participants can explore in greater depth topics covered in the plenary sessions and work in progress on academic support and related issues.

Business meeting for Academic Support will be held on Friday, January 4, 2019 from 7 am – 8:30 am.

National Trends in Philanthropy – What Development and Communications Opportunities Exist Outside the Alumni Base

Speaker: Jeffrey Hilperts, Senior Associate, Bentz Whaley Flessner

A changing world: How economics, technology, demography and politics are influencing fundraising for higher education: The wealthy are getting wealthier and the middle class is getting smaller. Demand for higher education increases globally, but access continues to be limited. Americans are giving record amounts to charity, but the percentage of Americans making gifts is declining. Data is both a silver bullet and a four-letter word. How do these forces shape the future of fundraising for higher education in America? This session will walk through how economics, technology, demography and politics are changing in real time and how those changes influence how we should approach our work in the years to come.

Framing Development and Alumni Relations from a Communications Perspective

Speaker: Alex A.G. Shapiro, University of California, Hastings College of the Law

Communications professionals share insights on how to increase the visibility of development and alumni relations while keeping the bigger picture of the law school in mind. Learn how to better align alumni and development news with the law school's overall marketing strategies to attract prospective students, promote faculty scholarship, and publicize the work of legal clinics, centers, and institutes. Shift your focus from showcasing development/alumni accomplishments and recognition to unique stories on how alumni and donations are making a positive impact in unique and meaningful ways.

This symposium, co-sponsored by the Sections on Civil Procedure, Tax, Bankruptcy, and Criminal Justice, examines how courts are financed and the growing reliance on user fees, whether for filing or defending civil cases; charges imposed on criminal defendants such as "registration fees" for "free" lawyers; the imposition of both civil and criminal "fines"; and the use of money bail. We explore whether and how constitutional democracies can meet their obligations to make justice accessible, both to participants and to the public, in light of the numbers seeking help from courts, high arrest and detention rates, declining government budgets, and shifting ideologies about the utility and desirability of accessible courts. These topics have prompted the creation of national and state task forces; litigation (including challenges to detention of individuals eligible for release but lacking funds to secure bail bonds, and the automatic losses of drivers' licenses for nonpayment of fines); and a mix of economic, political, and legal analyses probing the effects of "court debt."

For those interested in reading cases and commentary in advance, a 2018 volume, Who Pays? Fines, Fees, Bail, and The Costs of Courts, is available at https://law.yale.edu/system/files/area/center/liman/document/liman_colloquium_book_04.20.18.pdf. Many other articles are available and, in advance of the symposium, we plan to provide a bibliography with additional readings.

An edited set of essays will be published after the symposium in the North Carolina Law Review.

Civil Procedure business meeting will be held at program conclusion.

AALS Workshop for Pretenured Law School Teachers of Color

8:45 am – 9 am

INTRODUCTION AND WELCOME

Kabacoff, Riverside Building, Hilton New Orleans Riverside

Speakers: Cynthia E. Nance, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Robert A. Leflar
Law Center
Sean M. Scott, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Many minority law professors embark upon a career as a law teacher to have a positive impact upon students, to pursue justice and to transform the legal system in order to improve lives and communities. They often discover that they face special challenges in the legal academy, starting from their first day of teaching. At this workshop, diverse panels of experienced and successful law professors will talk about their goals and achievements as law teachers and legal scholars and offer ways to successfully meet these challenges as they arise in the context of scholarship, teaching, service, and the tenure process. By bringing together faculty who are navigating similar career paths, the workshop will facilitate relationships that can provide long-term sources of support.

9 am – 9:45 am

PLENARY SESSION

Success Stories: Now That I Have Tenure, What Are My Accomplishments and Triumphs as a Law Professor

Moderator: Cynthia E. Nance, University of Arkansas, Fayetteville, Robert A. Leflar
Law Center

Speakers: Jayesh Rathod, American University, Washington College of Law
L. Song Richardson, University of California, Irvine School of Law
Ediberto Roman, Florida International University College of Law

This panel will focus on success stories of tenured law professors. Speakers will talk about why they chose to become law professors, and share their accomplishments and triumphs as law teachers and legal scholars. Topics may include great classes, teaching effectiveness, law school or university curriculum and policy changes, student mentoring and guidance, publications, conference presentations, op-eds, blogs, community service or social justice projects, and awards for teaching, scholarship or service, or community recognition. Panelists may place these topics on a timeline, i.e. prior to the mid-probationary review, post-mid-probationary review and post-tenure.

9:45 am – 10:30 am

PLENARY SESSION*Kabacoff, Riverside Building, Hilton New Orleans RiversideNavigating the Path to Tenure and Promotion*Moderator: Kaiponanea Matsumura, Arizona State University Sandra Day O'Connor College of LawSpeakers: Devon Wayne Carbado, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law
Wendy Greene, Samford University, Cumberland School of Law
Xuan-Thao Nguyen, Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law
Lynnise E. Phillips Pantin, Boston College Law School

Speakers will focus their remarks on how to successfully navigate the tenure and promotion process. Topics will include how to balance scholarship with teaching and service, how to build an external network of support, and how to overcome common obstacles often encountered by teacher-scholars of color. This session is intended to provide participants with practical, concrete advice about how to set a scholarly agenda, to manage internal and external reviews, and to position one's self for success. In the context of this discussion, speakers will identify things they came to know post-tenure that they wish they had known pre-tenure.

SMALL GROUP DISCUSSIONS ON SCHOLARSHIP*Kabacoff, Riverside Building, Hilton New Orleans RiversidePart I

These small group sessions, to be facilitated by plenary speakers, will enable participants to explore and discuss more fully issues raised by the preceding plenary session.

Establishing External and Internal Networks of Support: Why is it important to develop and maintain professional relationships with teachers and scholars and others, outside of your home institution? What are some tips and strategies for developing and maintaining these connections? What are some tips and strategies for developing and maintaining professional relationships inside your home institution?

Conferences, Colloquia and Workshops: Conferences provide opportunities to present your work but which conferences should you attend? How can colloquia and workshop series enhance your scholarship?

Interpreting the Retention Letter: The purpose of the retention review is to determine whether a tenure-track faculty member is on track for tenure. What should you do if your review is successful but you are informed of weaknesses or areas of concern? What should you do if the review is glowing?

1:45 pm – 3 pm

PLENARY SESSION

Teaching, Service and Scholarship: Overcoming Challenges, Realizing Opportunities

Moderator: Brenda V. Smith, American University, Washington College of Law

Speakers: Danielle Holley-Walker, Howard University School of Law
Rose Cuison Villazor, Rutgers Law School

This final session will focus on teaching and service. With regard to teaching, law professors of color often report special challenges in the classroom stemming from dynamics that are hard to spot and to know how to address. This session will identify specific issues that may be of concern. How do I deal with difficult students? How do I ensure diverse participation in the classroom? How should I address the various differences among students—including racial, sexual orientation, or gender differences—and differences between students and myself? Speakers will offer some advice on how to plan and to facilitate classroom teaching in both large and small courses, and to be a more effective teacher.

With regard to service, new law teachers unexpectedly realize that they must provide service to their school, university, profession, and community as outlets for their academic and non-academic passions and interests. How do you approach the third prong of the tripartite journey toward tenure? How does one determine which service obligation to prioritize? Speakers will explain how service may be viewed as a gateway to learning about, and being active and influential in, the operation of your school and provide an opportunity to interact with your colleagues—and for them to interact with you—to build strong personal and professional relationships. Speakers will also illustrate the ways in which the power resides with you to transform your service obligations, create your own service opportunities, and follow your passion in order to develop and extend your areas of expertise and your networks at the same time.

SMALL GROUP DISCUSSIONS ON SCHOLARSHIP

Part II

These small group sessions, to be facilitated by plenary speakers, will enable participants to discuss issues related to scholarship. These issues might include (but are not limited to):

Developing a Scholarly Agenda: With whom should you discuss and share your work? What are some useful guidelines for selecting a topic, developing a writing schedule and completing the article, essay or book? Why is it important to read and cite other major contributors in the area in which you write?

Building a Scholarly Reputation: Why is it important? What are some strategies to enhance opportunities to present your work at conferences and external faculty workshops? Is it worthwhile to cultivate a social media presence? How op-eds may support your scholarly reputation. How do you determine whether your institution value your online contributions?

Balancing Service, Teaching and Scholarship: This group discussion will address any other questions not covered by the other groups. Topics may include how to best use research assistants; how to create and capitalize on synergies between teaching and scholarship; determining when and how you should say “no” to various administrative requests.

Free Speech on Campus: A Delicate Balancing Test

Moderators: Yolanda Ingram, The Pennsylvania State University – Dickinson Law
Troy A. Riddle, Albany Law School

Speakers: Henry L. Chambers, Jr., The University of Richmond School of Law
Erwin Chemerinsky, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

The First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution protects speech even if it is offensive. Recent incidents on college campuses nationwide, however, have left administrations grappling with how to bridge freedom of expression and the student experience.

This session will address free speech on campus; the potential challenges, obstacles and benefits. We hope to engender robust discussion that will address questions such as:

- 1) What can/should be done to limit hate speech?
- 2) Should there be no limitations placed on speech on campuses? Why or why not?
- 3) What are the fiscal and safety considerations for academic institutions when inviting controversial speakers to campus?

At the conclusion of this panel, those in attendance will be enlightened and better-equipped to handle this important issue both practically and intellectually.

Section on Jurisprudence, Co-Sponsored by Torts & Compensation Systems

Specific Jurisprudence: Philosophy Within Law

The Jurisprudence Section gathers this year to celebrate a distinctive kind of legal philosophy: “specific jurisprudence.” The more familiar term, “general jurisprudence,” refers to theories of the nature of law, such as those associated with John Austin or H.L.A. Hart. By “specific jurisprudence,” we refer to philosophical theories that aim to interpret and offer an organizing account of a particular department of law (a theory of criminal law, for example). We will have two panels on this subject. The first will examine the power and difficulties of specific jurisprudence, its curious balance of normative and descriptive content, its relationship to political philosophy and social theory outside of law, and related issues at the foundation of the genre. The second will examine and celebrate a forthcoming book on the theory of tort law that exemplifies the ideals of specific jurisprudence: John Goldberg’s and Benjamin Zipursky’s Recognizing Wrongs.

LEGAL EDUCATION MATTERS.

West Academic is dedicated to providing you with trusted content, innovative digital tools, and personalized service.

Stop by the West Academic booth to see a demo of CasebookPlus™ and West Academic Assessment, two excellent options for those looking to add meaningful student assessment to the classroom.

CasebookPlus provides student self-assessment at the classroom level. Adopt the CasebookPlus version of your chosen text and your students gain digital access to self-assessment quizzes keyed to each chapter, subject-area review quizzes, helpful explanations, and essay and short answer questions with sample answers (in select titles). Quiz customization and optional, flexible reporting is available for faculty.

West Academic Assessment

is an easy to use digital school-wide subscription offering designed to help faculty and administrators measure student learning and promote compliance with the ABA Assessment and Learning Outcomes Standards. It is the most comprehensive product for formative assessment that will help students succeed during all three years of law school.

CAP would like to thank all our authors—those who have been with us for years, those who joined the CAP family upon our acquisition of LexisNexis's law school publishing in 2016, and our new authors.

Visit us at Booth #109 to see our new titles and to share your book ideas with our acquisitions team.

Be sure to look for our exciting new offerings, including

- a new edition of Richard Wydick's Plain English for Lawyers, now in a 6th edition with Amy Sloan
- a new, revised 4th edition of Core Grammar for Lawyers (summer 2019)
- Core Knowledge for Lawyers, a self-directed software program designed to help students master course material in conjunction with their books.
