

Call for Papers for Section on Constitutional Law Program at the 2020 AALS Annual Meeting

The Section on Constitutional Law is pleased to announce a Call for Papers from which one or two additional presenters will be selected to participate in the Section's program with Professors Steven Calabresi and Reva Siegel and Dean Julie Suk at the AALS 2020 Annual Meeting in Washington, DC.

Form and length of submission:

The panel is titled "The Nineteenth Amendment at 100 – Its Contribution and Legacy," and will explore the Nineteenth Amendment's role in constitutional interpretation both inside and outside of the courts in the century after suffrage. The Section welcomes relevant submissions. Submissions may take the form of abstracts or more complete drafts, but preference will be given to more developed projects.

Submission method and due date:

Submissions should be anonymized. They should include a cover page with the author's name and contact information. The cover page should be the only part of the submission that includes any identifying information for the author.

Submissions should be sent electronically to Professor Lou Virelli at lvirelli@law.stetson.edu. The due date for submissions is Friday, August 30, 2019.

Submission review:

Papers will be selected after review by members of the Executive Committee of the Section. The Committee's review will consider scholarly excellence, as well as new and diverse perspectives on the interpretation of the Nineteenth Amendment. The author(s) of the selected paper(s) will be notified by Friday, September 13, 2019. The Call for Papers presenters will be responsible for paying their conference registration fee and hotel and travel expenses.

Inquiries or questions:

All inquiries should be submitted to Lou Virelli at Stetson University College of Law (lvirelli@law.stetson.edu / 727-562-7329).